This Week's Program: Rico Worl, Trickster Company - "Formline Design: Traditional to Modern"

Rico Lanáat' Worl is a Tlingit/Athabascan from Alaska. He is of the Raven Moiety and the Lukaax.ádi (sockeye) clan. He grew up in both southeast and interior Alaska, surrounded by many talented artists who inspired much of his artistic development and appreciation for art. From a young age his aunt Celeste ensured he had access to new mediums and continuously encouraged him to explore the visual arts.

Studying both anthropology and art allowed him to explore the technical relationship of shapes, including the relationship between human figure drawing and traditional Tlingit formline style.

Rico currently works as the Arts and Culture Specialist at Sealaska Heritage Institute, where he develops art workshops, encourages a Native arts economy, and designs Northwest Coast Native clothing. He has also taught and volunteered at the local community art studio, The Canvas.

As an aspiring formline designer, he uses painting as a method of studying form. Further, he explores formline and modern imagery with the hopes to create traditional art in a modern context, designed to instill pride in Native people and provoke thought in all.

ROTARY NEWS...

WATER SUMMIT URGES ROTARY MEMBERS TO INVEST IN YOUTH

Almost 200 million days of school attendance are lost every year because of the lack of proper sanitation. Many diarrhea cases in children result from transmission of disease in schools rather than at home.

“A school is a place where children should feel safe, not a place where they are susceptible to infection,” says Lizette Burgers, senior adviser of UNICEF’s Water Sanitation and Hygiene (WASH) in Schools program.

But the message at the World Water Summit on 4 June in São Paulo was positive: Rotary members and their clubs can make schools healthier places through programs that provide clean water and better sanitation.

“WASH in Schools is about addressing the rights of the children. This forum can help us all learn how to provide a healthy, safe, and secure school environment,” said Burgers. “This will help ensure quality education, because healthy, well-nourished children can fully participate in schooling. It increases school attendance, because students have to spend less time traveling long distances to fetch water. And it encourages children to take pride in their school and community by providing them with a renewed sense of dignity.”

“WASH in Schools is about revitalizing and bringing revolution in societies,” Gupta said. “These young children can become our agents of change, and help us reach our goal of a cleaner, better, and more educated world.”
