Serving meals in Galveston, Texas, USA

Arnold R. Grahl - Rotary International News - 22 October 2008

When a fire claimed the life of John Capps' mother and destroyed his home 50 years ago, a sergeant in the Salvation Army was the first person to offer comfort, bringing clean clothes and spending money.

All these years later, Capps, a longtime member of the Rotary Club of Morehead City-Noon, North Carolina, USA, is eager to give back.

He and his wife, chair of the local advisory board of the Salvation Army, are part of a team of volunteers from all over the country serving meals from mobile canteens to residents of Galveston, Texas, which was ravaged by Hurricane Ike in mid-September.

"We are here for the same reason we are in Rotary: to serve other people," says Capps, a past district governor. "This was a great opportunity to Make Dreams Real."

John and his wife, Jane, have met more than a dozen other Rotarians among the Salvation Army disaster response teams. Capps has been wearing his "Rotary at Work" shirt, making him easy for other Rotarians to spot.
