John Wood, Telos CEO to Speak

John Wood is chairman and CEO for Telos Corporation. As CEO, he orchestrates the company's efforts to secure the vital assets of the world's most demanding enterprises, including military, intelligence, and civilian agencies of the federal government and NATO allies around the world. Telos solutions enhance customer's ability to safely conduct their global missions by securing communications, systems, networks, and access to critical facilities and information.

Wood joined the company in 1992 as executive vice president and chief operating officer, and in 1994 was named president and chief executive officer. In March 2000, he was appointed to the newly created position of executive chairman of the board, which he held until he became chairman of the board subsequent to a restructuring of the Board of Directors in 2002. In January 2003, Wood resumed the positions of president and CEO. He has also served as CEO of Enterworks, an affiliated company, from January 1996 to August 2005, and as chairman from January 1996 until present.

Prior to joining the company, Wood worked on Wall Street for Dean Witter Reynolds, UBS Securities and his own boutique investment bank. He earned a B.S. in business administration in finance and computer science from Georgetown University.

He was appointed by the Secretary of the Interior to the National Forest Foundation, and serves as treasurer and member of the board of directors for Project Rebirth, a non-profit organization that is documenting the strength of the human spirit in coping with the aftermath of September 11, 2001 at the World Trade Center. A time-lapsed film of the rebuilding of Ground Zero frames the year-by-year development of the lives of nine 9/11 survivors. Project Rebirth is the only living record of the minute-by-minute development of the site, and will be a component of the WTC Memorial Museum and archived in the Library of Congress. The proceeds of the film will be reinvested in the Project Rebirth Center, which will help meet an urgent need for improved care and support for victims of and first responders to future disasters of all kinds, man-made or natural.

Wood is also an active member of the business community, championing the concept of civic entrepreneurship. He is the founding chairman of the Loudoun County CEO Cabinet, a membership organization composed of a select group of CEOs, presidents, board chairs/vice-chairs from Loudoun County, Virginia's top corporate and entrepreneurial firms and non-profit/government institutions. He also serves as chairman of Loudoun County's Economic Development Commission.
