August 8, 2013

Jack Levenson from the Aguayuda Organization will speak on Thursday, August 8.

Jack has counseled and worked with children from non-mainstream backgrounds throughout the east coast of the US, Ecuador, and Colombia for over 15 years. He lived and worked in Ecuador for over 2.5 years first as a Peace Corps Volunteer and then as an independent development worker at CENIT, an urban school for underprivileged girls and their families. Jack is passionate about finding resources for underserved communities and linking private sector endeavors with non-profit initiatives. In January 2011, Jack took a 6 month sabbatical from his US work to be in Colombia to further the work of Aguayuda while working with alternative energy companies and international non-profit organizations.
