ROTARY CLUB OF ASHBURN, VIRGINIA

Volume 1, Issue 36

December 16, 2010

Today's Program...

The Rotary Club of Ashburn is pleased to welcome Austin Hall, lead field representative for Appalachian Voices' outreach and organizing efforts in the state and across the country. Appalachian Voices is an award-winning, environmental non-profit committed to protecting the land, air and water of the central and southern Appalachian region. Since the impacts of coal threaten Appalachia more than any other single source of pollution, we are committed to reducing coal's impact on the region and advancing our vision for a cleaner energy future.

Austin also assists with coordinating efforts in educating Congress and regional state legislatures about Appalachian Voices mission. He grew up in the mountains of western North Carolina, and his love for the mountains inspires and fuels his grassroots organizing and outreach work at Appalachian Voices

Founded in 1997, Appalachian Voices is headquartered in Boone, N.C. with offices in Charlottesville, Va. and Washington, D.C. They believe in working in concert with others to produce maximum results. Appalachian Voices is a proud members of the Alliance for Appalachia, Waterkeeper Alliance, Wise Energy for Virginia, and Repowering NC coalitions.

E, the Environmental Magazine recently listed Appalachian Voices as one of their top 5 favorite ways to become environmentally active. We have also been recognized as a Google Earth Hero for our website, iLoveMountains.org, which was also named one of the first ever GOOD 100 "people, ideas, and organizations changing the world for good" by Good Magazine.

Welcome, Austin!
