PROGRAM

Introduced by: Ola Olutuya

Summary of the talk: Body Language of Political Leaders During TV Debates

Apparently there are more cues to lying than their lips are moving!

Robyn observed the speed that leaders' comments are shared around the world with the convergence of media (radio and TV are shared to social media almost instantly). Means the impact of the impressions of their positions or comments can be very broad and very fast.

He shared the variety of experience he has as a Public Relations reviewer. Regular requests for radio and TV analysis of debates and events.

He shared a variety of examples of body language and the implied negative meanings that go along with them. He also provided coaching on good body language and the positive impression it can leave.

Thanked by: Ola
