Rotary Bulletin

December 8,
2005

With the last house disappearing from his view, Santa's kometic was limping home Northward. It had been a trying season for Santa and the gang this year with global population at plus 6 billion coupled with the fact that it seemed the ratio of nice to naughty people was on the rise. The resulting increase in the number of people eligible for gifts had all contributed to overworked elven production, worn reindeer hooves, and a bent sled chassis. Even Santa groaned at the pressures of the percolating stew brewing in his innuts from all those extra cookies consumed. "Whew! What an evening!" contemplated St. Nick, "All those children...all those toys...there is just so many girls and boys!" Santa's woe-is-me contemplation was suddenly interrupted by a flashing strobe signaling an incoming message. He brushed his mit across the photonic display interface to reveal a pale likeness of his production elf. Santa's eyebrows knotted together as he listened to the message; Production shifts are realigned for early next year due to the 1000 gift orders already on the order bank.....

....When I thought I was early I was actually late for our regularly scheduled Rotary luncheon. I guess that is what you get at this time of year when you spend your days daydreaming of kid's gifts, cheer, and everything that is Christmas. So in the Mount I merrily walked to be greeted by the gathered grinning kin and snatched my label from the button briefcase. Rot. John W. had passed his notes over to me to continue the Bulletin for the day where he was busy with other matters. I did take note that Bob Lewis was both our guest and speaker for the day before my head started to swim again with more Christmas lore. I did catch something on the periphery about da Prez saying something about driving the membership.....

The drive Northward was still far from over when the worry and consternation playing upon Santa's mind coupled with the long and exhaustive evening produced something akin to highway hypnosis. After about three or four head bobbing crotch watches Santa had fallen asleep at the helm. The sled, riding a scintillating kaleidoscopic trail of magic sparkles, had veered a little to the right. Without Santa's guiding hand, the reindeer had ventured into some turbid air which created just enough of a bump to startle Santa back to reality. With Polaris off to the port quarter Santa gave the left rein a gentle tug to place the guiding star over the stem. Awake and to his taps, Santa's ruddy face realized a widening grin as a thought to solve all of his concerns effervesced from the infinite within. "I know what I must do, I know what I must say. I'll hold an elven meeting when I get back today." Cheeks rosy and bright, Santa pushed the sled faster and harder into the cold moonlit night.....

....With cold water running down my chinny chin my awareness was snapped back to the Here and Now from the nether astral Christmas plane. Setting down the water glass and sopping up my shirt, Rot Brenda proceeded with an attendance report of 80 percent including makeups. Rot Frank inquired into what qualifies as a makeup to which our secretary replied a confident answer of something which I was a little dim at that moment to record. Rot Father then proceeded to ask for a page reference in a rule book but thought better of it as it would tie up the meeting needlessly. Perhaps this could be a good discussion point for a fireside.

Rot Scott J arose to present the draw which was won by our newcomer Rot. Lisa. However she was unsuccessful in drawing out the Ace of Spades making the pot build again for another day. Rot. Scott then proceeded to fine Rot Richard for not wearing his ID button. Button or not, Rot Richard added to the pot and promptly retired to his seat. My seat, on the other hand, was getting a little too cosy as I was half slumped into the chair thinking, dreaming, and hoping for snow to come in time for Santa's trip from the North....

....And when Santa's arrived at the North Pole that night and had gathered his elves, he spoke to the gathered:

"I'm getting old, I'm getting grey
There's not enough time to do that's required each day
So many girls, so many boys
All looking at me to give them toys

First I'll find out how many toys I can make
That should be as easy as baking cake
Then I have to find out how many children there are
And that can be done by wishing upon the brightest star
Next I'll throw away my "naughty and nice" book
Considering the amount of time that thing took Instead my elves will mail out preprinted forms
To all the nice children, and none to the scorn
They will choose what toy they want and prioritize their selection
'Cause toys next year will be rationed to every collection
And all the forms are to be returned either phone, fax, or mail
To be placed securely in a huge drum without fail
A draw for toys will take place before the magic day
To see which child's house we visit, and which one we stay away
If by chance after four years of no toys and no fun
Do not worry. It is good as guaranteed; for this child will be in pool one
For you see my elven friends this is what I desire
For you see I decided to retire.....

.....My tired eyes was sending images of Bob Lewis to my brain; and my brain was telling me to "pay attention" for I was taking notes. Reality realigned itself as I fathomed our guest Bob was up front addressing us about the good work being done by the community food bank. They have been a group that has been around since 1992 accepting donations in terms of food and money. All the food donations which gets collected nationally get redistributed on a per capita basis so that all regions have a fair opportunity to address the needs of its less fortunate.

Even though monetary donations are always welcomed, tinned food items are advantageous when donated due to their high product costs long shelf life. When the food bank does receive monetary donations, such funds are used to purchase items such as turkeys (especially at this time of year) where such items can be supplied in bulk, at a competitive price, and can be returned for credit if not distributed with a hamper. Currently, the food bank is budgeting for 500 hampers to distribute on December 17th. President Joanne thanked Bob for his talk and on behalf of the club presented the food bank with a check for $500.00 and a rotary coffee mug.

With that and no further business to present, da Prez struck the bell at around 1:30 pm and bid the gathered members farewell until next week whilst I slipped away one final time into Christmas never-never land....

In utter astonishment, the gathered elves were stunned into quietness, with mouths open screaming silently. Finally it was one of the elves up front who stepped forward to confront Santa on this revelation:

Santy, its not that you may want to retire
But think of all those we'll have to hire
The paper work itself is such a daunting task that I may have to go back to my drinking flask

First we will have to send out some forms to every child and for them to fill and return, that would take awhile
The request for toys would be sorted by girl toys, boy toys, or either sex and this would take many weeks at best
Then the young applicants would go into pools 4, 3, 2, or 1
considering that we do not have toys for everyone
I also have to mention the fee that we collect
From all those girls and boys; I haven't thought about that yet
Then we produce toys as much in excess
For those girls and boys who will enjoy our success
And for those who don't get any toys, its not very funny
For we have to stick them in a lower pool, and send them back their money
Next year will come in like the wind
And we will have to do this damm thing all over again
So Santy, its not that you need to be retired
But for us to do this, we will all need to be inspired

Santa was silent, and for several moments no one made a sound. Then with a HO-HO-HO, Santa reassured them:

Don't worry my elven friend, no need to falter
For I was only testing the water
If I was to retire, as you made plain
This place would of gone totally insane
First we will hire more elves like you said
That shouldn't be hard for your little head
With all those extra elves, we can construct more toys
For all those wanting girls and boys
Next I'll go home and get my "good" and "bad" book
To see who is nice, and who is still a sook
This should take care of the incessant demand
And put us back on our original plan
So increase your workforce, and get the place going right
And I'll come back again and see you in a fortnight
Cause right now I'm going home to head off to bed
To casually reflect on what you have said
For when I do decide to step down and retire
This place will end up in a state of dire
For then boys and girls from the world across
Will email their Christmas wishes to Bill Gates of Microsoft.

Merry Christmas and have a Happy New Year

Rot Paul

Rotary Bulletin

Thursday, Dec. 22, 2005

John was appointed to lead "The Ode". He sang with such gusto that he was later fined for dominating the chorus. (I thought that was what he was asked to do.) Ray did his part at the music contraption but ended with such a flourish that singers went off in all directions, sharps and flats. He was also fined for his discordance. Tim provided the grace but at least he escaped the Finster's wrath.

Brenda made a fantastic calculation which included all present plus the Rotary ticket sellers and other make-ups. The final result was an incredible 152%. The frequently fined Joanne claimed Presidential privilege and asked for a dry cleaning fine to be levied against Scott K. Apparently Joanne was required to deliver Scott's cleaning to his hotel. Scott in turned bragged about his sales of Rotary tickets where he sold $210 worth in one stint in the mall. Bravo Scott! He challenged others to do as well. I should think that his record will stand secure. For many of the rest of us, we suddenly seem to become invisible when we sell tickets as our acquaintances try to not see us.

The executive was asked to make positive action on the Rotary Park and also moving past donations to the targeted charities and providing the appropriate recognition.

The Dec 29th meeting is normally scheduled to be the railroading day. That is election of officers for those who have not yet been assigned. RI likes to have the names 6 months in advance of the actual start date of the Rotary Year .
