

Rotary Governor Tells of Club's Role In Local, National Life

A Rotarian must be "an investigator, an educator, instigator and participator," said District Governor Rev. Oliver B. Strapp at Monday's dinner meeting of the Grande Prairie Rotary Club.

One of 207 District governors supervising Rotary activities throughout the world, Rev. Strapp paid the Grande Prairie Rotary Club a visit as part of an itinerary which will take him to 23 of the 49 clubs in his district during the month of August. His territory extends from Kenora, Ontario, to Dawson Creek, B. C.

During his visit in Grande Prairie, Rev. Strapp inducted two new members into the Grande Prairie Rotary Club and spoke to the Rotarians on the Rotary creed of service in a Community and in the International field. He was introduced to the Rotary Club by President Charles Husel.

Rev. Strapp is the principal of the Indian Residential School at Brandon, Manitoba, and is a member of the Rotary Club of Brandon.

Presenting new members Max Henning and Jimmy Johnson with their Rotary pins, Rev. Strapp told them that in joining Rotary they were accepting the responsibility to encourage and foster service. He said they were accepting responsibility for a high ethical standard of service in their personal, business and community life.

Service in Rotary is not just a commodity but a necessary part of life, Rev. Strapp told the Rotary Club, in his address. He said that the Rotary motto of service was not of recent origin and referred to John, the blind King of Bohemia, killed in battle by the Black Prince. When his party was found the motto "I Serve" was found with it and adopted by the Black Prince. Since then it has been retained as the motto of every Prince of Wales.

"Rotary is not just another goodwill organization," said Rev. Strapp. "It is a dynamo for international understanding, and a common ground for all creeds, and nationalities."

"The problems facing you are the problems facing fellows all over the world," said the District Governor. "The whole plan of Rotary is designed to promote understanding."

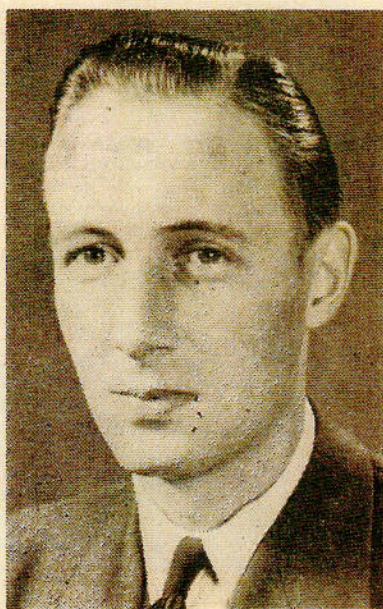

He told the Rotarians to seek out the service they can do best in their community. He told them not to do a second rate job but to seek out the avenue of service best suited to them as individuals and make their efforts successful.

He told them to investigate and determine where they could best serve. Educate the people to look for service from Rotary, he said. Instigate the job to be done and roll up your sleeves and participate he urged.

On the international front, Rev. Strapp said that Rotary service means contact with other people and other lands in an effort to understand them better.
