The program this week featured presentations from the two High School Interact Clubs that our Club sponsors.

Each club is expected to be involved in two local and one international charitable service project in the school year.

The Henry Wise Wood Club was represented by teacher sponsor Liz Senger, and students Hafsa Jamil and Saba Abbasi. There are 41 members in the Club. This year they have earned over $400 for Polio Plus thru the sale of Decorated Pumpkins. They will be knitting scarfs for the homeless again this year.

The Dr. E. P. Scarlett Club was represented by teacher sponsor Caroline Hendry, and students Cassandra Betts and Austin Lee. There are 35 members in the Club. This fall they have earned over $500 through bake sales. The funds will be directed to World Vision and to the Calgary Youth Center.

the Arch — Notice

Due to the Remembrance Day event, there will not be an Arch published next week (November 11th).

Guten Morgen!

I got back from a two week language camp yesterday and boy was it eventful! On the first day the four teachers had us introduce ourselves and just talk a bit in German to see the extent of our knowledge. After having heard our German, they separated us into two groups: the advanced German class and the beginner German class. I was briefly in the advanced German class due apparently to my pronunciation, however, the first lesson was filled with grammar entirely new to me and so I switched into the other class. The advanced German group contained some people who had been studying in their home countries for three or four years and in the case of one boy from Ecuador, he studied at the German school of Ecuador for seven years. I think switching into the other group was more beneficial, I learned a lot of vocabulary and reviewed some basic grammar. My lessons before leaving proved to be very helpful when it came to the German cases and articles. At the end of the camp, we had to make presentations, entirely in German, about our home country. Being the only Canadian there, I was tasked with creating something 5-10 minutes long, alone, in a language that I only knew the basics of, in two days. Since no one had told us about the presentation beforehand and I didn't want to be leaving my laptop in a youth hostel for two weeks I hadn't brought it with me. So there I was, a little in over my head, when I just decided to talk about elements of Canada I'm most familiar with. I talked a little bit about the history and the colonisation and the bilingualism, I explained the significance of our flag, I mentioned the multiculturalism in Canada and how it's made for a diverse culture. And then, reminded of my Tuesday lunch meetings, I sang the anthem. This was on the last day of camp and my voice was all but gone from a cold I had caught but I forced out those first words and this calm just settled over me. I finished this presentation without once speaking in English. For the first time since my arrival I had solid confirmation that I was in fact learning the language and it was a feeling like no other.

During the camp I celebrated my two months of being in Germany. I can't believe time is going by so quickly! So many things are happening and I've never been this busy in my life. In three weeks we have Berlin tour, and then a few weeks after that we have another orientation, and then in January we have a ski tour and in March we have Euro tour. This is on top of all the activities with my family and all the soccer and school. School is going a lot better and I've made a few close friends. I really enjoy art and English and even math because it's the universal language and I understand the lessons. Next Wednesday I'm going to my first meeting for drama club which is a big thing at my school and I'm excited to get involved and meet more people

I Skyped with my dad and he informed me that it's snowing in Calgary. No snow yet here and it's possible we might not get snow at all. The South Americans are gearing up for their coldest winter ever while I'm about to have my warmest one.

How are things with the club? How is everyone? How does Gregor like St. Mary's? Any news from Berto? How are all of the exchange students?

Hope all is well!
Karla

Thank you Chinook Rotary!

Has everyone warmed up yet? – my nose is still a little frosty! That was a fabulous ending to a fantastic season with Chinook Rotary. Under the leadership and guidance of head chefs and serving pros Hank, Janet, Bruce and Pat, this team has perfected the Westrow BBQ – smooth, coordinated, efficient, with a happy, fun loving group of cooks and servers who share their positive energy with all the causes we helped to serve this year.

The whole experience has been better than ever anticipated, more positive than one could imagine, with such outstanding people to be involved with. I know, sounds over the top, but it truly was a very successful program and a lot of fun!! I am so grateful to each and all for your amazing energy and service.

Thank you, Thank you,
Sue Spicer
