LIFE AFTER PRISON Barbara Pickering and Jennifer Sputek

Bart introduced our two guest speakers, Barb Pickering and Jennifer Sputek to discuss life after prison.

Barb started the discussion explaining her reasons for being involved. She was entering the Masters of Counselling program at U of C, and after a while determined that she wanted to work with women who had recently left prison. She wanted to help them raise awareness in the community about who they are and to positively affect the stigma of having a criminal record. She volunteered at the transitional facility to get to know some of the women and learned of a research project called "Inside Out" which included service providers, researchers, women with incarceration histories and correctional services of Canada looking at gaps in services for women as they exit prison. This group developed digital stories and banners with photographs much like those displayed in our meeting place today, giving individual outlines of women with prison records. The goal was to raise community awareness. It is perceived that women are keepers of social order and when healthy, contributing members of society they affect their children, their partners and their families. When a woman goes to prison that seriously, adversely affects the entire family and society. There is also the expense as it costs one and a half times as much to incarcerate a woman as a man. Locally it is about $146,000 to keep a woman in the remand centre for a year, and up to $250,000 in a federal penitentiary as opposed to probation, bail supervision or community supervision work orders which can be $25 per day. A woman's reintegration into the general community is not only a socially just an ambition but an economic imperative. The average woman coming out of jail has a grade 8 education, is a mother, and was probably unemployed and on social assistance before incarceration. She probably has a history of childhood abuse and trauma which continued into adulthood, had substance abuse and is less likely than males to return to jail. Her imprisonment was not likely for violent crimes but rather property crimes and occasionally assault against a father went to hospital with depression, then was sent to a mental institution and Jen thought her mother was trying to get rid of him. Her relationship then with her mother was not good. At age 12 she became a runaway, and at age 16 was involved in a robbery with a sentence of 7 years. After release she moved briefly to B.C. but returned to Calgary where she got pregnant, delivering twins, one of whom is autistic. She gave up all addictions but Carlos did not, and came home one night so high on morphine that he died later that night. She was facing life with no job and two babies, and essentially no education. She discovered she was not eligible for a government widow's pension so

Those fined included Hugh Delaney, and Tom McFee. Good News Bucks came from Ian, Gordon, Dave W., Garry Miller, and Tammy whose nephew was picked out of 2,000 applicants for a scholarship.

Club Banners

The approximately 20,000 banners in the Rotary History and Archives collection reflect clubs' hometown pride and their connection with the international organization.

In addition to incorporating the Rotary emblem, banners often include symbols or imagery of a club's town, region, or country. Others represent local craftsmanship or cultural traditions by displaying leatherwork, weaving, embroidery, or hand-painted designs.

The Rotary Club of Indianapolis held a contest in 2009 called S.E.E. the World (S.E.E. stands for Schedule a trip, Exchange a Banner, Enrich your Rotary experience). Traveling members resorted to selling crack on the street, which she did for 10 years and stayed out of prison to raise the kids. She did some part time work and some community work. In September 2008, an Emergency Response Team raided her home where crack was discovered of course ... she pleaded guilty and received a 30 month sentence. Her children were put in a foster home. She was under strict conditions after her release and did everything asked of her, but it took 5 months to get her children back.

After 6 months she was asked to help the Inside Out research team. There was no advocate for her when she needed it so she works now to help others. She speaks to community groups about her history and the need to have advocates for women leaving prison. Female offenders are "pretty normal" and while they did something bad, they are not generally bad people, not psychopaths or pathological liars. She hopes to have an impact in her role.

Rob W. presented certificates to both speakers in which a woman in the Dominican Republic received a macro loan.

documented their experience on a short questionnaire and presented it to the club with the collected banner. This practice began when the club's history committee began taking digital pictures of each of the nearly 1,400 banners collected from around the world. They found most banners have no name, no date, and no story. S.E.E. the World is their way of capturing that experience while promoting international fellowship.

A cowboy told his secret to a long life. He said, "You gotta sprinkle a little gunpowder on your oatmeal, see. If you do, you'll live to a nice ripe old age."

So the cowboy did this religiously every day, and sure enough, lived to the nice ripe old age of 96.

When he died he left behind 4 children, 8 grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren ... and a 16 foot hole in the wall of the crematorium.
