TREES FOR TREES 2020 PROJECT

SEEDLINGS PLANTING IN BUGOMA WATERSHED AREA, UGANDA

September, 2020

Introduction

The Chimpanzee Trust has been operational in the Albertine Rift of Uganda since the 2007 and foreseen the restoration of forest cover in the Albertine Rift. One of the key challenges for conservation in the landscape is high rate of deforestation and forest degradation that directly impacts on the ecology and behavior of wildlife. With the strategic direction of the field program being the conservation of chimpanzees and enhancement of their habitat, it has been imperative for the Trust to partner with key persons in the planting of seedlings.

Last year the Chimpanzee Trust provided 4130 seedlings and this year we supplied 4,498 seedlings that were planted under the Trees for Trees project. We planted in key areas that have high chimpanzee-human overlap that are directly impacting on the ecology of both species and wellbeing of communities.

A total of 44 farmers in the in the Bugoma area received seedlings to restore corridor forests in Kagadi district (24 farmers) and 20 farmers in Kikuube, the villages of Kyenjojo and Rwembaho, Kikuube district received woodlot species. The Chimpanzee Trust has been working with these farmers under our human wildlife conflicts project.

The supplied 4498 (4000 bought and 498 extra) were delivered. 3298 indigenous tree seedlings and 1200 woodlots species are contributing to conservation of forest and wellbeing for communities.

Seedlings delivered to villages in Kikuube.

Delivery process

Kikuube districts received 1200 woodlot species (eucalyptus emiini) while Kagadi farmers received 3298 indigenous tree seedlings of mahogany spp, Terminalia spp, Cordia spp and Maesopsis eminii. The tree seedlings were delivered to each village to ensure individual received what they had requested for.
