Scott Greelis offers tips from book on 'destroying a business'

Coming Up Tuesday

Paul Dovre's annual Christmas message, a long Rotary tradition, highlights Tuesday's meeting. Cindy Nolte is sergeant at arms, and Tammy Finney and Dave Tranby are greeters.

President John Andreasen welcomed visitors, guests and members, with a special nod to our new Rotarians.

Dale Hetland discussed the club's next service project — joining fellow Rotarians from Fargo on Jan. 31 at Scheels Arena to pack food kits for Feed My Starving Children. The clubs' goal is 400 volunteers, 80 of them from Moorhead. Project sponsors hope to raise $550,000, too, to pay for 2.5 million meals.

Sergeant at Arms Eric Johnson collected happy dollars for news from NDSU and MSUM, the Sederquists' wedding anniversary, and both Kay Parries' and Gary Nolte's 30th anniversary as members of Moorhead Rotary.

Greelis recommends thwarting defenses

Member Scott Greelis's business Lion's Way was created to help small businesses deal with changes in management and with conflict. He shared some of the strategies from the book he's been writing for the past five years, based on his 25 years' experience as a student, soldier, business owner, engineer and consultant.

December 24 — NO MEETING

December 31 — NO MEETING

The problem, he said, is that people find a defense and stay with it, resulting in making their business fragile. The solution is to wake up ... and to understand the issues, be flexible and communicate. He said many businesses fails stem from being a boss, not a leader. Others stem from believing everyone is the same; misery is normal; or "feeding the wrong wolf" of one's nature (the bad one, not the good one).
