Austrian aid convoy drives all night to deliver supplies for Ukraine

By Sebastian Adami, Rotaract Club Klagenfurt-Wörthersee, Austria

On the evening of 2 March, I set out with a team of Rotaract members and colleagues from six nations to deliver relief supplies to contacts waiting for us near the border of Poland and Ukraine. Our five-vehicle convoy traveled through the night to get there. But we were heartened by the response we saw all around us, people flashing their lights or giving us other signs of encouragement as they saw our relief supply convoy marked by flags that identified what we were doing.

This effort came about through the wonderful network we enjoy in Rotary. Like many, I watched with horror the images coming from Ukraine following the Russian invasion of the country on 24 February. These images included people who had lost everything, their belongings, their homes, and some even the lives of loved ones. The more I witnessed people having to seek refugee in subways or shelters and the flood of displaced people seeking safety in other countries, I knew I had to do something. I contacted friends of mine in the Rotaract Club of Klagenfurt-Wörthersee, and we were all united in our desire to help.

Within a short time, I set up a fundraising campaign with a long-time club member Ivana Tadic and our club president Anna Bäuchler with the active support of our members. In one weekend, we collected many donations from family, friends, and work colleagues including canned food, water, sleeping bags, generators, and medical supplies. The question became how to deliver these items.

As part of our campaign, I had reached out to a former coworker, Alessia Sasina, who was born in Kyiv. She had also been raising donations. But it was not until we both talked to Max Aichseder that we hit upon the idea of bringing the donations to the Poland-Ukraine border ourselves. He provided us with some vehicles for the transport, with which we could load our own collected donations and those from Alessia. We had reached friends in Ukraine and knew what was needed through the assistance of the Honorary Counsel for Ukraine, Nils Grollitsch, and through our Rotaract network.

Headed for the border

Setting out on 2 March, we drove all night to reach the border the following morning. The closer we got to the border, the calmer we became. We were aware of the situation we were getting ourselves into but we were buoyed by the support we saw around us. For security reasons, we decided to meet our contacts a kilometer before the border crossing.

After more than 1,100 kilometers and 14 hours of driving, we arrived. It was an indescribable feeling I will never forget. The gratitude was amazingly great, and our hearts filled up. From there, the relief goods were transported on to Kyiv, Kharkiv, and Zhytomyr. We unloaded the goods on the spot and agreed to bring back with us some people who had fled the conflict, mainly women and children, exhausted but relieved they had made it to safety after many hours on the road. Before we got back, we were already receiving photos and videos showing that our donations had arrived at hospitals and locations in need.

Second convoy

Since our first campaign was so successful, we put together a second convoy on 15 March. We again coordinated with our contacts from the Rotaract clubs on what was most needed. The atmosphere on the second trip was a bit different than the first. There was much more activity on the roads, and on the way to the border we saw several vehicles heading for Ukraine as aid convoys.

Looking back on the past weeks, I am incredibly proud of what we accomplished together in such a short time. It has been one of the most formative events of my life. We were one of the first, if not the first, aid convoy from Austria to bring goods to Ukraine. We helped as much as we could without hesitating, and with the help of our Rotaract and Rotary contacts, the supplies arrived where they were needed.

Mobilizing volunteers through the power of Rotary

By Lisa Hunter, Rotary Club of Maidenhead Bridge, Berkshire, England

I am so proud to belong to an organization that empowers ordinary people to work together to make a difference in other people's lives. Through the Rotary network, we come together to use our skills and knowledge to support each other and build up our communities.

Nowhere was this more apparent to me than at the beginning of the pandemic, when our community went into lockdown and people were isolated and shut in. My club formed a Community Response Team to mobilize a network of volunteers to do what we do best: support those who need help in difficult times.

In mid-March 2020, we set up a web portal where people could fill out a form and ask for our help with certain errands including shopping, picking up medication, or even walking their dogs. We also had volunteers who would call people who wanted someone to talk to. In addition, we supported 23 families referred to us either directly by local schools or through other charities, with weekly food parcels.

We launched a marketing campaign to get the message out including sending out press releases, conducting radio interviews, and posting notices around the community. We also knew we would need many volunteers, so we put together a robust volunteer management plan outlining what we expected of our volunteers, how they could protect themselves and the people we were helping, and where they could call to talk about any concerns or share their experiences. We established links to trained counselors to provide emotional support for volunteers if needed.

We ended up supporting more than 150 households working with other groups and charities in our communities and assembling a pool of 120 volunteers. Some of these were existing Rotary members, but the vast majority were people who responded to our call for help. We were able to perform more than 3,800 errands that equated to more than 6,500 volunteer hours.

Our worry was that we would emerge from the lockdown and find that there had been people who hadn't been able to get the food or help they needed. We wanted to make sure everybody had somebody to keep them supplied and looked after.

As part of the weekly food parcels, I went to the supermarket for 42 weeks conducting a mammoth shop for food, filling my car to the point where I couldn't see out the rear-view mirror and then transforming my home into a mini supermarket. My daughter Chloe got involved and helped to create all the food parcels for our team of five delivery drivers to pick up.

To bring a bit of fun to the project, we also included special treats such as Easter Eggs for Easter, Christmas presents and sweet treats for the festive season, a pumpkin to carve at Halloween, pizza making kits and special baking kits that included a recipe and all the ingredients needed to make it.

I had one mom send me photos of her children making flapjacks using the recipe card and ingredients we'd included in their parcel one week. They looked so happy, but I did feel slightly guilty as they insisted on getting up at 6 a.m. to make them. Still, it showed how we were making a difference by providing cheer through tough circumstances.

As the children went back to school, we also included various items of stationery and cards wishing them well.

The last element of our plan included providing winter support grants to help struggling families pay their heating bills and giving them tools and information to manage their ongoing bills or reduce utility costs.

Mobilizing volunteers through the power of Rotary cont'd. from p 14

One thing we have been mindful of during the whole project is ensuring sustainability. The last thing we want to do is pay off someone's heating bill and have them be in the same position in a couple of months. This involved working with other charities to help families research better energy providers or referring some families to debt counselling services.

We were one of the first towns in the United Kingdom to set up mass vaccination clinics and once again we rallied our volunteers to help manage the lines, register people, and make them feel at ease as they came in for their shots. We had a separate team calling all those eligible for vaccination to encourage them to come in to be vaccinated.

Never in our wildest dreams did we think the project would become as big as it did, or that there would be so much need. But it was so rewarding to be there to help when people really needed us. I am immensely proud of my club's efforts and believe the project demonstrated the power of Rotary to make a difference.

MOTIVATIONAL QUOTE

Great Expectations

by Webster Edwards

It is customary for us to face each new year with great expectations, believing quite fervently that every facet of our lives will be qualitatively different from what we have experienced in the past.

The tragedy is that our expectations are at times unreal and we fail miserably in our anticipated achievements before we have even begun.

We are sometimes guided by the school of thought that affirms that nothing ever is impossible, that what the mind conceives can always be achieved.

There are however serious limitations to this belief as our experience will readily affirm.

For example, it is impossible for those of us who are advanced in age "to turn back the hands if the clock."

Having realistic expectations are therefore the prerequisites for the management of stress, happiness, and a meaningful and rewarding life.

But these expectations must always be realistic, flexible and achievable.

Have a happy new year my friends.
