CONDUCTING SERVICE PROJECTS IS POSSIBLE, REWARDING DURING PANDEMIC

By Ekaterina Tashlykova, secretary, and Julia Fedeneva, president-elect, Rotary Club of Novosibirsk-Initiative, Russia

The COVID-19 pandemic has changed many aspects of our self-awareness. Virtual meetings are now common, but what about doing service projects? Can these be virtual too? As a club, we explored this idea with our first service project since the pandemic hit.

As a doctor, I am in touch with a lot of essential medical workers. These men and women are on the front lines, battling to keep us healthy and alive. They risk their own health and hardly see their families to provide us with high-quality, timely medical care. Many of them work in hospitals that have a shortage of protective supplies. The facilities do not have enough masks, gloves, or antiseptics to keep them protected from the virus.

We decided to focus our attention on donating masks to these hospitals, and created two plans.

First, we connected with women who were currently on maternity leave who were sewing masks for multiple purposes. We found people who could supply us with textile and elastic bands, and worked out the logistics for delivering more than 1,000 masks to 10 area hospitals.

Second, we raised money to buy more masks. We were able to secure a discount on masks that were more comfortable and ecological. We let the community know what we were doing, and when they found out, many people donated to our cause.

After that, we decided we wanted to help kindergartens that were still in operation through these times. We provided them with sanitizers and masks. The teachers, many of whom were in a state of anxiety over the threat of contracting the virus, were delighted to receive our help.

Now we are organizing a children's art project to show our support for the doctor's working on the front lines.

PEACE IS AN INSIDE-OUT JOB

By Lindsay Griswold, Senior Specialist for Youth Exchange and Youth Protection

I grew up in a home that was not peaceful. So, I think peace is something I have always unconsciously sought, in my life, work, hobbies, and other interests. The summer after I graduated from university, I joined the United States Peace Corps, and served as a Deaf Education Volunteer in Kenya. This experience changed me in too many ways to count, but the traits I gained then that I still value now are patience, flexibility, and resilience.

Upon my return home, I served in AmeriCorps, worked as an educator, received my graduate degree in social work, and more. Each of these endeavors further ignited my passion for peace.

I continued this peace work when I began my career with Rotary International in 2014. Specifically, I work with Rotary Youth Exchange, one of the strongest on-the-ground peacebuilding initiatives we have here at Rotary. When Rotary announced a partnership with the Institute for Economics and Peace (IEP) in 2017, I was excited to see how it would be implemented across Rotary's programs, including Youth Exchange. I completed the Rotary Positive Peace Academy when it first launched in 2018, and later learned about the IEP Ambassador program from a Rotarian who was in the first cohort. It seemed like a perfect fit.

Ambassadors participate in a series of online webinars representing the most comprehensive, data-driven analyses within the field of peace and conflict prevention to date. They are then required to put their knowledge to use by organizing a presentation or creative project for their network or community.

Rotary's headquarters is in Evanston, Illinois, USA, but I have telecommuted from my home in Asheville, North Carolina, USA for the past few years while my spouse attends university. Initially, I designed my project as an in-person training at a Rotary Youth Exchange orientation session for inbound, outbound, and rebound students in the Asheville area (District 7670). Because Rotary Youth Exchange is a study abroad program, I planned to focus on the "good relations with neighbors" pillar of Positive Peace.

But then, the COVID-19 pandemic intervened. Social distancing and stay-at-home mandates were put into place, making an in-person presentation impossible.

Fortunately, I fell back on that flexibility I gained as a former Peace Corps volunteer. I pivoted my training toward a virtual audience of returned Peace Corps volunteers, focusing on the same pillar, but now analyzing our various countries of service through the lens of both the 2019 Global Peace and Positive Peace Indices.

The project ended up being the most meaningful part of the program for me, although at first, the idea of putting one together made me really nervous. What should I do? Who should I present to? Do I even know enough about Positive Peace to intelligently speak about the topic? When I had to change my plans, I became even more anxious. But because of that, I was motivated to work harder on a high-quality, interactive presentation that would be meaningful to my audience. I was truly grateful to speak with my peers about our shared but unique Peace Corps experiences, dust off my teaching skills, and communicate new ideas that sparked interesting conversations around Positive Peace.

As I look at the civil unrest gripping the U.S. and in places around the world right now, I am reminded of what I learned through the IEP Ambassador program. Peace is an inside-out job and the first sign of healing. I believe this applies to us as people and the nations in which we live. In order to activate Positive Peace, we must first start within ourselves and slowly move outward to our relationships, local communities, cities, states, provinces, countries, and the world.

RCSA Activities Highlight: Throwback to 2019/2020 Installation Ceremony

HOLGER KNAACK SEES OPPORTUNITIES FOR ROTARY TO CHANGE, THRIVE

Rotary International President-elect Holger Knaack is encouraging Rotarians to seize the many opportunities Rotary offers to enrich their lives and the communities they serve.

Knaack, a member of the Rotary Club of Herzogtum Lauenburg-Mölln, Germany, revealed the 2020-21 presidential theme, Rotary Opens Opportunities, to incoming district governors at the Rotary International Assembly in San Diego, California, USA, on 20 January.

Rotary isn't just a club for people to join, but rather "an invitation to endless opportunities," said Knaack, who becomes president on 1 July. He emphasized that Rotary creates pathways for members to improve their lives and the lives of those they help through service projects.

"We believe that our acts of service, big and small, create opportunities for people who need our help," Knaack said. He added that Rotary creates leadership opportunities and gives members the chance to travel the world to put their service ideas into action and make lifelong connections. "Everything we do opens another opportunity for someone, somewhere," said Knaack.

Changing for the future

Knaack also urged members to embrace change so Rotary can expand and thrive. Rather than setting a specific target for increasing the number of members, Knaack said he's asking clubs and districts to think about how to grow in a sustainable and organic way. He wants clubs to focus on keeping current members engaged and adding new members who are the right fit for their club.

"We need to stop thinking of new members as people we can mark down as statistics and then forget about," Knaack said. "Every new member changes us a little bit. That person brings a new perspective, new experiences. We need to embrace this constant renewal. We will grow stronger as we learn from new members." Knaack pointed to Rotary's Action Plan as a compass that can guide clubs as they evolve. He recommended that every club have a strategic plan meeting at least once a year. At that meeting, clubs should ask where they want to be in five years and how they can bring more value to their members.

Knaack also wants to see more women in leadership roles and see Rotaractors play an integral role in how new clubs are formed and run. He encouraged district leaders to create new club models and rethink what it means to be in Rotary, and allow young people to be the architects of these new clubs.

"We have to be open to new approaches, and creating unique clubs for younger people is just part of the solution," said Knaack. "Let Rotaractors decide what kind of Rotary experience works best for them. These young people are bright, energetic, and they get things done." In stressing the need for Rotary members to embrace change, Knaack noted that time won't slow down for Rotary: "We will not let rapid change defeat us. We will capture this moment to grow Rotary, making it stronger, more adaptable, and even more aligned with our core values."

MOTIVATIONAL QUOTE

“Give thanks”

By Webster Edwards

“ Consider the joy of being able to have a good night’s sleep or the consolation of being assured by your doctor that you are in good health. Or consider the satisfaction of seeing your children making the best of the opportunity they have been given.

Consider the sheer panic caused by the Coronavirus outbreak and the millions of people throughout the world whose lives have been effectively displaced.

Recently, a colleague who might be regarded as a successful businessman emerging from a prolonged period of confinement said that he would not have wished the discomfort and pain suffered on his worst enemy.

In his own words, “health is all we have and is a gift to be treasured.”

A friend recently told me that she was concerned about the future because she could not see a clear path on the road ahead.

We tend to take so much for granted without recognizing the many things for which we should be thankful.

Today, reflect on the many positive things that you have been experiencing on your journey through life, remembering always to give thanks.
