Why zone partnerships work

By David Bobanick and Jim Bell, Rotary public image coordinators (United States)

As Rotary leaders, none of us work in a vacuum. Big West Rotary (Zones 26 and 27, western United States) created a model to leverage the collective knowledge and expertise of its coordinator team to train and support district and club leaders in membership, the Foundation, public image, and other areas. We think building a collaborative, multi-zone model to enhance training and support could be beneficial to your districts, as well.

We started by bringing our Rotary coordinators and assistant coordinators together to develop resources, share ideas, and design a monthly online training for all the district public image teams in our combined zones. The training is shared with all district leaders and other regional leaders in our zones, and incorporates feedback from district leaders.

Recent topics

Typically, we include two different topics presented by subject experts. There is time for a question and answer session. And it's all recorded and shared on the zone's website.

Recent subjects have included:

- What you need to know to be an effective public image coordinator
- How to build an effective public image team
- Tips for using social media to promote Rotary
- Navigating the Brand Center
- Designing an engaging website

As a recent example, we held a training session to empower districts to develop successful World Polio Day events. The training was attended by 200 people and we had a number of new or expanded World Polio Day events in our zones as a result. All membership, public images, and Foundation chairs at the district level were invited. End Polio Now coordinators shared how they build storytelling tools. Rotary coordinators offered tips for engaging members and developing outreach plans. And public image coordinators explained promotional tools available in the Brand Center and on endpolio.org.

We are in our third year of this model, and leaders are seeing the benefits of not only working together but the consistency of training. It truly is all about everyone being on the same page at the same time!

Rotary Tech Tip

Interacting with your virtual audience

Keeping your audience engaged during virtual training makes learning fun. Wooclap is a free interactive tool that you can use in your sessions in several ways:

- Add multiple choice questions or polls
- Assign topic ratings
- Generate ideas with participants
- Create word clouds

You can quickly and easily use these features at the start of your next session, during or after a presentation, or as part of a breakout session. Try it.

😊 MOTIVATIONAL QUOTE 😊 The power of the spoken word By Webster Edwards

Have you ever said anything unkind that you wish you could recall upon reflection ? This has happened to all of us from time to time.

A few days ago, a colleague of mine was extremely strident in his criticism of an associate. Hours later, good sense prevailed, and he apologized unreservedly for the inappropriateness of his comments. But the damage was already done, and with it most naturally came the hurt that lingered on.

The fact is, that no apology can satisfactorily erase the hurt experienced from an unkind word or an untruthful statement.

Omar Idn Al-Halif reminds us "that there are four things that cannot come back, the spoken word, the spent arrow, the past, and the neglected opportunity".

Let us remember that one thoughtless or unkind comment can destroy the friendships which have been built up over many years.

In our interaction, we should therefore strive to communicate with courtesy without seeking to demean the character or opinion of others.
