USING SCIENCE OF RESILIENCE TO STRENGTHEN ROTARY CLUBS DURING COVID-19

By Jenny Stotts, District 6690 membership chair

Resilience is the process of adapting in the face of adversity. When we experience a traumatic or stressful event, our brains activate a number of pathways to protect us. These biological processes help keep us safe. It's in the recovery from these events that we grow and change and become stronger.

Many of us are living this reality right now in the face of the COVID-19 pandemic. The good news is, there are ways to grow our capacity for resiliency. And we can use this time to strengthen Rotary, by working together to grow and foster resilience in our fellow members and our clubs. Here are a few tips:

Connect: A critical building block for resilience is simply connecting with others. Check in with fellow members. Call them, send them a message, work to make sure they can access your virtual meetings. As a club, consider connecting with other clubs to weave yourself further into the global fabric of Rotary.

Perspective: When we experience ongoing adversity, it is far too easy to lose hope. Help members maintain a realistic and positive perspective. Rotary clubs are facing challenges right now including adjusting to new meeting platforms and worrying about membership or giving. Remember that the challenges you face today are not a reflection of your future. How you respond to today's challenges will shape the future.

Wellness: We are living during a time where words like "quarantine," "lockdown," and "zoom fatigue" are common and relatable. Promote and prioritize wellness among your members. Use your virtual meeting to ask members to share ways that they are taking care of themselves and their families. Be gracious when a member needs to take a break, skip a meeting or have an extra few days to respond to an email. Now is not the time to keep points or compete with who is doing more or less. Speak and listen with kindness.

Purpose: When we give energy to others, it has a way of recharging our own batteries. It fosters a sense of self-worth and gives us feelings of purpose and validation. Plan service opportunities with your fellow members that you are able to accomplish and approach. Offering smaller projects concurrent to your larger, ongoing projects gives everyone in your club an access point to service.

Gratitude: We benefit from mindful and intentional reflections in gratitude. It can promote the release of neurotransmitters like serotonin and dopamine, which help us feel joy or happiness. Take a moment to share thanks to your fellow members and create opportunities for your entire club to extend gratitude to your community and your partners.

When we collectively care for our members, we help create pathways to grow and foster resilience. When we scale these practices to the organization level, we unlock new potential to strengthen our clubs and enhance the member experience.

The world deserves Rotarians and Rotary clubs that are resilient, adaptable, and strong. Remember to take care of one another. But, take care of yourself, too. You deserve to be your best and most resilient self.

MAKE IT THROUGH A HURRICANE

Mike Stafford, Rotary Club of Freeport, Bahamas

We knew that a storm was coming and that it was a bad one, so we were preparing. I run a small shipyard, and we stood down because the winds got to be too much for us to deal with pulling boats and ships out. We'd been through storms before, so we had all our supplies, our batteries. The only thing we had to buy was gasoline for the generators. My wife put up all the shutters.

I knew that we had to evacuate our main house the minute I heard gurgling in the toilets. I looked out a small hurricane window that we don't shutter and saw water was all the way up to our back deck, which is about 160 feet from the seawall of the canal we live on and 22 feet above sea level. I said to my wife, "Honey, we've got to bug out." That took a little while because we had to stuff our two cats in duffel bags, and cats don't like getting stuffed in duffel bags with 180-mile-an-hour winds howling outside.

We went to a cottage on our property that's about 150 feet higher than the house. We were in bed listening to the wind howling. It was about 3 in the morning, and we were holding hands, not sleeping. I was freaking out because you could hear the tornadoes whizzing around. My wife said, "Honey, I know that after this is done, you're going to go to the water plant because you always do that and you always want to help people. Don't worry, I understand, because you're a Rotarian."

Dorian ran for more than 30 hours. It just parked right on top of us. I've been through quite a few hurricanes, and it was like nothing we'd ever seen. The next day, I got half-way to the water plant — which was built with the support of a Rotary Foundation grant — and was greeted by the police who had come to escort me there. When we got to the plant, there were already about 200 people there with their jugs. The police had to clear a path through the crowd for me.

When I opened the door, I knew we had trouble. One-gallon jugs of water were scattered all around, which meant the electric motor for the pump had been underwater. I poured some water on it, sprayed some contact cleaner, and doused it with diesel fuel. Then I turned the switch and the machine fired up. We were making water.

The great thing about being a Rotarian is the response. We set up a system right after the storm. It just kind of fell together. The assistant governor for our area, Liz Knowles, took control. Across the street from the water plant, Christel Lightbourne, of the Rotary Club of Grand Bahama Sunrise, organized a warehouse as a distribution point for food and clothing. Jaims Carey, president of the Rotary Club of Lucaya, was in charge of trucking goods all around to people who couldn't get out because they had lost their car or they didn't want to leave their stuff. Billy Jane Ferguson from the Lucaya club is in charge of the sort center for relief supplies. And James Sarles from the Sunrise club is producing videos that he's sending around, and that's raising us money. He's kind of our ways

FINDING OPPORTUNITY IN ADVERSITY

By Rajeev Wadhwa, President, Rotary Club of Rowville-Lysterfield, Melbourne, Australia

When social distancing rules took effect in our area, we shifted to virtual meetings without missing a single meeting. We knew we needed to keep club members engaged and happy in these uncertain times. So even though some of our planned events could not proceed, we knew one event was just too important to let go.

Taking the art show online

The Rotary Club of Bayswater has run the Knox Art Show for the past 45 years. This year, the event was run as a collaboration between the Rotary clubs of Rowville-Lysterfield and Bayswater. The show normally has two components; a physical art gallery and an opportunity to view art online through www. Gallery247.com.au. When it became clear that we could not move forward with our physical exhibition, our combined boards met and discovered that Gallery 247 is well equipped and capable of running the art show 100% online.

We had already received all the artwork in a digital format from our artists. Our judge was willing to do his judging online. We discussed the idea with our sponsors and artists, and they were delighted that the show was still proceeding.

To promote the change, we:

- Produced stickers advertising the Virtual Art Show and placed them on the physical signs that were around town
- Created new posters
- Updated our website
- Extended the duration of the show to two weeks (instead of two days)
- Sent out newsletters to artists, sponsors, art lovers, family and friends

It was not difficult to set up. Gallery 247 offered both technical and implementation support, and one of our Rotarians was able to set up the virtual gallery without any programming skills.

In this, our 46th year of holding the Knox Art show, we had over 300 artists participate. We had more than 5,100 visitors to the online gallery, five times as many visitors as we typically get during the previous five years. People were able to purchase both paintings and photos of the artwork online.

We learned a lot in a limited amount of time and are keen to have both a virtual and in-person art show next year.

We recently conducted a virtual ANZAC service (25 April) to honour and to pay tribute to all those who have served our nation in times of war, conflicts and peacekeeping operations. We had 95 people register, and the service was even put on a big screen in a retirement village. It was well received. We are now keen to conduct this service every year and make it available to wider groups including other retirement villages.

MAKE IT THROUGH A HURRICANE CNT'D. FROM P9

and means guy. We've also got individual Rotarians who've come to the island to do cleanup, and they've heard somehow about the water plant. Plus I've got clubs calling from Sweden, Germany, Winnipeg, Toronto, Chicago, and California, sending us supplies and money. It's just overwhelming. I'm trying to hold back tears as I'm talking about it.

My house pretty much went underwater with all our stuff. We had fruit trees laden with mangoes, avocados, breadfruit, starfruit. That all went under 6 feet of water. Every day is different. Some days are up, some days are down. You laugh, you cry, you get emotional. And then you see something good, like you find your first Paul Harris pin in the corner. Then later you find your second Paul Harris pin way off in another part of the house. Then, while you're mucking out something, you find your third Paul Harris pin. And now you're really happy, and you realize that we'll get through it.

FINDING OPPORTUNITY IN ADVERSITY CNT'D.

Virtual ANZAC service

While new situations like the COVID-19 pandemic pose challenges, they also offer opportunities. And as Rotarians, we need to be ready to seize these. Some of the opportunities we found through having an online format were:

Being able to easily invite Rotarians from other clubs, regardless of physical distance.

Inviting speakers from anywhere in the world, raising the bar on our speaker presentations.

Engaging vulnerable communities and sections of our society who may be feeling isolated and unable to connect in-person through their usual support networks.

During these challenging times, I encourage all Rotary clubs to meet online, support members through ongoing fellowship, and look for the new opportunities that are emerging.

We've discovered the motto "When life throws lemons at you, make lemonade," I hope you do too.

MOTIVATIONAL QUOTE "Having an open mind"

By Webster Edwards

C Don't get upset when others do not share your well reasoned opinion. The world would certainly be an unexciting and uncreative place if there were no diversity of viewpoint.

The 18th century philosopher Georg Wilhelm Hegel advanced the system of dialectical thinking.

It is the recognition that there are inherent truths in opposing sides, and it is from this clash of opposites, that truth and real understanding emerges.

This calls for tolerance, and the recognition that no individual has got a monopoly on truth.

That in the midst of our certitude, when our most treasured beliefs are challenged, there is the need for humility, and an open mind.

We should also display a willingness to learn, and in order to understand others, try to enter into the life experiences of other persons.
