By Jan Touney

As the University of Northern Iowa looks toward marking its 150th year during 2025-26, its vision for the future includes new academic programs to meet the needs of the workforce and ensure its graduates are ready for the jobs that are there.

That was one message delivered to North Scott Rotarians on Friday, April 5, by UNI President Dr. Mark A. Nook. Nook, in his second visit to North Scott since becoming president in 2017, opened with a popular subject – the success of two North Scott High School alums “making waves on our campus.”

Forward Grace Boffeli and guard Tytan Anderson have led the university’s women’s and men’s basketball teams over the past three years, Nook said, and will be back to play next year.

Nook cited statistics on undergraduate graduation rates. More than 60 percent of undergrads graduate within 5 years, 50 percent in 4 years, and 9 percent of students graduate in 3 years. The ability of students to take community college courses in high school is leading to undergrads graduating in less time.

“UNI’s success in reducing the time students spent earning their degrees enhances efficiency in university operations,” he said.

It also helps to keep down student debt, which now averages around $24,000 per student, he said.

Creating a future vision for UNI, which has included re-envisioning the university’s brand, strategic planning, academic positioning and a capital campaign, is well underway.

Many people associated UNI only with education degrees, he said. That is changing.

“What we really needed to do was to look at academic programs and make sure students are ready for the jobs that are there,” he said. “What are the academic disciplines that students will be excited to get into?”

When COVID-19 hit, hospitals indicated a need to train more nurses. UNI will institute a Bachelor of Science in Nursing program in the fall, he said.

“It all comes back to asking this question: What are the workforce needs in the state of Iowa?” he said.

Also launching this year is the first-ever engineering degree offered by UNI, the Bachelor of Science in Materials Science & Engineering, as well as a Bachelor of Science in Materials Science Engineering Technology.

Nook said UNI has seen great success with its Our Tomorrow capital campaign, with its original $250 million goal met early and now raised to $300 million.

Funds will enhance student scholarship opportunities, support academic programs and faculty and make improvements to some of the Cedar Falls campus “iconic spaces” such as the Gallagher Bluedorn Performing Arts Center.

The celebration of UNI’s 150th birthday will begin in 2025 and continue through the fall of 2026.

“This is a special institution,” he said.
