This week is our annual gavel passing – an apt way to describe the transition from one steward to another. Like the baton in a relay race (although hopefully not like last week’s Ironman relay...) the gavel is passed from one at full speed to the next, also at full speed. I initially wasn’t sure about the “race” bit of the analogy; however, we are in a race to end polio, we raced to sell raffle tickets to keep kids warm and we raced to collect the most clothing to donate to Joppa (we won that race!).

I used the word “steward” as that also seems apt to me. Back in my Andersen days, from Day 1 we were told that a key to both our individual and the collective success of the firm was the need for us to understand and practice the concept of stewardship. It soon became clear that we were each stewards of our own immediate world, and that world expanded over time - from our own client workpapers, to a small staff, to multiple clients and then in some cases to divisions and offices, even countries. The firm was in each of our hands, and that was ultimately proven, even if it was in the most disastrous of ways.

And so it is with Rotary (just not the disastrous part). During my first meetings in Gaithersburg it wasn’t clear how the service projects were selected and conducted and how so much was accomplished. But it soon became clear that it was the dedication of the members, each a steward, who created Hope and Magic and Found Rotary.

The same is true here. At our Christmas dinner this year we highlighted the more than 20 local organizations that we had already supported, and that was before more projects and events, the Wolves game, raffle ticket sales, trail clean-ups, CFUM meals and clothing donations over these past 6 months.

This Friday I will pass the gavel to Tim and thank everyone again for their collective stewardship of our club. The relay continues!

Thank you for Creating Hope in the World, Jack

Michael Wagler - Varsity Cinema

Michael Wagler, from Varsity Theater, gave a history of the Varsity through the 80 years and the redesign and historical preservation that has happened.

The building itself has housed a Studebaker company, Atlantic bottlers, and then theater since 1938.

The funds for fixing the theater (complete with an elevator) was made possible through a non profit and "main street" funding, and partial private ownership. It now features 515 seats, 2nd floor loft seating, and handicap accessible seating.

The current theater was reopened Dec. of 2022, and provides movies 7 days a week and 12 months a year. It has had 200 movies, hosted 14 film makers, has had 40,000 visitors and 6 state wide project awards. Movies are selected for their art value, diverse voice, and of course financial returns. It is supported through 2/3 ticket sales and 1/3 thru non profit of the 1,000 annual members.
