Rotary In the News

Her Royal Highness The Princess Royal, Princess Anne, lauded Rotary's achievements and the respect it has earned at the highest levels of government around the world.

Speaking to an enthusiastic and welcoming crowd on 24 June at the Air Canada Centre in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, The Princess Royal addressed attendees of the 2018 Rotary International Convention

Since 1970, The Princess Royal has served as president of Save the Children UK, an international nongovernmental organization that focuses on health, education, protection, and disaster relief for children.

Save the Children began pilot programs of its own to combat polio in Africa in the early 1980s. It discovered the difficulties of delivering the vaccine where it was most needed, she said.

Enter Rotary. With its "astonishing global reach," as The Princess Royal called it, its extensive understanding of cultures and languages, and its members' "endearing habit of leaving (their) egos at the door," the organization ingeniously overcame obstacles that baffled others. In doing so, Rotary, along with its partners, has brought polio nearly to full global eradication.
