

Meet Kevin Medved

Introduction by Joe Phillips

It is my pleasure to introduce our newest member, Kevin Medved, who holds the position of Tax Manager at the CPA firm of Peterson Sullivan, LLP.. Kevin has been nominated by Gerry Adams and Chris Russell and his classification is accounting – tax services.

Kevin was born in North Carolina, but his father was in the military and with the normal moving around, he actually grew up in the Lake Chelan region in Manson, WA. He attended Eastern Washington University, graduating with a degree in business, and after graduation took a finance position with the Art Institute of Seattle. He then earned a second degree in accounting from Central Washington University. In 2013 he was finishing an internship with the CPA firm, Clothier and Head, when the firm merged with Peterson Sullivan and he was able to land a position with the new organization. At the firm's Seattle office he specializes in tax consulting and compliance for professional service firms and the hospitality sector. Currently, he is pursuing a Master's in Tax Accounting degree from Golden Gate University.

In his limited free time, Kevin likes to cook, travel, fly fish, speculate on changes to federal tax law, and be a basketball fan. Drawing upon his birthplace, he is a devoted University of North Carolina Tar Heel follower, so unlike a number of us in Seattle of late, he usually has something to cheer about! His wife Allison works for an advertising firm, and they have just returned from a three week trip to Italy. We were considering yielding Kevin's introduction time toward a ten minute travelogue, but we knew our Sergeant of Arms would not approve.

Please join me in welcoming our newest member, Kevin Medved.
