Victoria's Vignettes

In our meeting last week, we discussed our progress on our Club goals for the year. The one "thermometer" reading that was a bit down was Club Service. Now, if you are like me, it is not that you have not done service you just have not recorded your time on our website or used the QR code offered each meeting, or you tell yourself that you will do it later. But this speaks to the bigger picture of what Rotary and being a Rotarian is all about. Rotary International tells us we have five avenues of service: Club Service, Vocational Service, Community Service, International Service, and New Generational Service. It is the last of this list that really stopped me in my tracks. After all, in this our Centennial year are we not setting the stage with our actions the pathway for the next generation to carry on our club and continue to have the impact on our community we have benefitted from for the last 100 years? Do we not owe it to our fellow club members to take the few moments to document our contributions? Then why is it I never "found the time"? Part of me felt a little odd writing down what I do; I could feel the nuns from my early childhood telling me not to brag and that service is its own reward. We do what we do not for recognition, but because we are called to action. But there is it ... we are called to action. We have stood up and joined an organization founded on service. We have already identified ourselves as people of action. We stand each week and recite the four-way test as a reminder of the principles we swore to use in our vocations and in the way we live our lives. So, in this season of pledging anew, I pledge to take the time to record my service in all aspects, not for me but for those that come after me to see that being a Rotarian is living a life of purpose, a life of action, and, yes, a life filled with hours of service that need to be remembered for decades to come so that our successors can say this is the Club we built. So, go to <https://www.arlingtonrotary.com> and start recording your part of the storied history of our Club.

squares that made noise when stepped on. The group had to work together to find the best path to victory. They also had to build and then dismantle a shelter as a team of 12 people. The goal of the activity was to learn how to work together as a team. During the activity, the participants signed their family's shirts.

Rachel, a junior at Arlington High School, faced challenges during the first day of a team-building activity. With many leaders in the same group, it was difficult to get started, but their group eventually found a way to work together effectively using different forms of communication, including nonverbal communication. Rachel also enjoyed the graduation and formal dinner, where they learned how to dine properly.

Ola, a senior at Arlington High School, had many new experiences at RYLA camp, including trying cheesecake for the first time. She was able to form connections with people she wouldn't have otherwise gotten to know and learned that sometimes it's important to be a follower in order to learn how to lead. Despite the demands of school, Ola valued the memories she made at the RYLA camp and was grateful for the opportunity.

RECOGNIZING THE PAST TO INSPIRE THE FUTURE

Why Classification?

In Observance of Rotary Vocational and Service Month

Rotary uses a classification system to establish and maintain a vibrant cross section and representation of the community's business, vocational and professional interests among members. It further develops a pool of resources and expertise to implement service projects.

Our Club actively continues to use the classification principle to enable us to utilize various degrees of members' expertise and interests for a variety of opinions and input into our Club's activities.

Interesting and past classifications included here from records in 1963 make for a fascinating comparison to today's list.

Sam Wine, Electric Light and Power; George R. Zachvitz, Department Store; Edgar Williams, Men's Clothing-Retail; T.J. Vandergriff, Automobile – Retailing; L.K. Vaughn, Frozen Food Locker; F.H. Wadley, War Veterans Service; O.E. Schrickel, Jr., Architect-Landscape; W. Hugh Ross – Fencing-Steel Wire; C. Wade McCoy – Drapery Mfg.; George W.
