Two Weeks Ago: Mark Turtor introduced us to “Detention Alternatives”, a home monitoring system which has replaced residential custody for some juveniles in the justice system. The program focuses on rehabilitation through community service, comprehensive case management, continued school attendance, and employment. A maximum of 12 juveniles may participate at any given time, supervised by 6 officers. The program has an 86% success rate. Failure, when it occurs, is usually a result of substance abuse (the program includes random drug screening).
