FOOTBALL FEVERISH

AN 80-year-old Sainted Editor managed to impress a Millennial Something new member, not with his academic robes, upon which Carter House commented, "You look like a wizard," but with Sainted Editor's claim to be a wizard in the decade-old video game, SKYRIM. He earned even more points by declaring that he played as a pacifist (in a game dedicated to mayhem)!

He Who Shall Be Named, Joe Camarena, assigned himself the Invocation but generously permitted Maria Mott to lead us in the Pledge. She was also Greeter for this meeting dedicated to FOOTBALL.

SERGEANT HAYDEN recognized our perennial guest, Marna Keith, Brad's better half. About to be newly-minted Porcha Maten introduced her guests, Reggie Hill, Michael Davies, and Maria Jaiamillo! She won the Most Guests Contest hands down. Veronica Andrulat, Plano Chamber's Program Manager, sat in on our meeting to keep an eye on us.

Joe introduced us to Hot Dogs, Doritos, Cokes, and Cookies, and he promised FOOTBALL TRIVIA and FUD. Getting the business of the day out of the way, he reminded us of our duty to nominate the Rotarian of the Month of November.

Porcha invited us to a Veterans Day (11/11) celebration at her Legacy Prep Charter School, after which Joe solicited for BUBBA BRAG BUCK$.

Jerry Aris, suitably attired for the occasion, offered his BUCK$ on behalf of his son, soon to be promoted to Major General, the highest rank represented in Texas!

Not to be outdone, the Head of the Young Republicans, our SERGEANT HAYDEN PADGETT, announced his candidacy for House District 70 and dropped a suitable DONATION.

Then, everyone having forgotten the Moving Candlelight Ceremonies, we inducted Porcha Maten and Carter House un-(moving candlelight)-ceremoniously. John Caldwell, their sponsor, graciously permitted them to pin themselves, thereby adroitly dodging several lawsuits. Joe inducted them into a Worldwide Rotary of 1.2M members over 200+ countries, in each of which they'll now be welcomed.

John then treated us to a Show and Tell of his substitute teacher techniques with middle schoolers, complete with whiteboard notes and construction paper appropriate to a lower grade. Well, actually, the papers were already cut and prepared as tangrams. After having the “class” recite his name, academic pedigree (Duke), and work history (J. Cash Penney), he recounted sacking a member of his team for alcoholism, among other failings. (I’m sure that cheered his class immensely.) That’s nothing: his son is an Amazon Shift Manager in charge of 100 employees; 40 were left after Christmas. Having them in the proper frame of mind, he then pointed out that he keeps a Santa List of Good and Bad children to “*put the fear of G*d*” into them. (Delusions of grandeur, perhaps?) Four children made it to the wrong side of the ledger; they were told that their record would be expunged if they could be good for two days in a row.

He explained topographic maps as “rice paddies” in SE Asia. Then, in a demonstration of keeping 7th graders busy “so they don’t misbehave,” he instructed us to make a square from four of the tangrams to prove that we’re “smarter than a 5th grader.” Then if we could do the same with five of the pieces, we’d be smarter than an 8th grader! Carter House complained that he could not now pay attention to the rest of the meeting “because I must finish” this puzzle. (That’s him pondering the solution above.)

Then self-proclaimed FOOTBALL ignoramus, Joe Camarena, (you’re not alone, Joe) pulled out his TRIVIA list, cautioning us to raise our hand rather than blurt out the answers. Correct answers would be rewarded with at least one point; incorrect ones would subtract a point. The members with the highest score, thus deepest knowledge, would have their choice of fabulous prizes. (Not having a prayer, Sainted Editor failed to note them.)

Joe led us in the 5-Way Test and blessed our departure at 1:04. The Doritos were a distant memory as were the hot dogs. Members looked in vain for the overpriced beer.
