The Cause

South Africa is a rapidly urbanising country with a population of 50 m people. This brings with it challenges including the uplifting of communities – economic & ecological inter-reliance. As cities grow, economic growth remains slow in recovery and more people find themselves unemployed, it becomes more difficult to provide services and see to the needs of communities in traditional ways. Citizens need to assist government in providing innovative, responsive solutions

- The Emergency Vehicle Service and its principle beneficiaries, Mercy Net and the Disaster Management Volunteer Corps are groups of people responding to this challenge
- Much of this must be done by volunteers and local communities - eg prepare for extreme events; ensure disaster preparedness; equip ourselves to be self-reliant given the geographic uniqueness.
