Wanting to protect her two children from their violent father, Letty fled to the rural part of the Philippines, hoping to hide from the person causing her living nightmare. That day, she said good bye to a violent household, and goodbye to clean water. What was once readily available to her, now can't be found for nine miles. She walks in tropical, 90 degree heat; overheated, yet unable to even get a drink of water to quench her thirst. She does it for survival and for her babies.

Be the change.
