Tonight's Program:

Behzad Parva gives his Classification Talk

Behzad Parva, MD was born in Iran and came to the United States at five years of age, along with his Mom and younger brother, Shahab. His Dad preceded their arrival to begin a residency in Pathology at the University of Pittsburgh. His childhood years were spent in several small towns throughout Western Pennsylvania.

As a Pennsylvanian, he attended Westminster College in New Wilmington, PA and travelled to Philadelphia for Medical School at Temple University School of Medicine.

After completing Medical School, he remained at Temple for his General Surgery training, which also including a one year research fellowship at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School. After completing the General Surgery residency, he continued on with a Plastic Surgery Residency at the University of Indiana.

Eager to get to work, he joined a Private Practice Plastic Surgery Group in Louisville KY, which provided a strong initial experience with patient care in the community and also the workings of a private practice surgical office.

This experience prepared him to venture out on his own and together with his family, they decided to return to the East Coast. He moved to Loudoun County in 1997 with his wife and three daughters, opening a solo practice in Leesburg. Given his desire to serve women with breast cancer, he focused primarily on breast reconstruction.

He enjoys his free time with friends and hiking, riding, reading and flying.
