

Who's a ROTARIAN?

He's a person
in your neighborhood.

Perseverance and contribution are the two modes in which JEFF TUCKER spends most of his waking hours.

Jeff's logistics and freight transportation business, Tucker Company Worldwide, has been in operation for three generations. Today it thrives within a $200 billion industry as the oldest, privately-held freight brokerage in America.

The energy and commitment with which Jeff approaches everything he does is reflected in every aspect of his life – from his workout regime, which evolved from running into competing in triathlons, to his relationship with the Rotary Club of Haddonfield.

“I thought I was joining Rotary to network, and to get to know neighbors better. Little did I know it would change the trajectory of my life in profound ways.” That change came when Jeff began volunteering with fellow Rotarians at Fellowship House in Camden, a setting in which local children and their families find support.

“Certainly I've met many neighbors and made new friends through Rotary, but it's opened my eyes to ways that one person, working with like minded individuals, can make major differences in the lives of others.

Jeff and his wife, Heather Gallagher Tucker, live in Haddonfield with their four children – Jacob, Suzanne, Katie and Megan. Heather is an attorney and a law clerk for Federal District Court Judge J. William Ditter, Jr. in Philadelphia. The members of the Tucker family share a wide range of interests, especially sports.

Would you like to meet Jeff and Haddonfield neighbors like him who serve others and have fun while doing it? Consider yourself invited to attend one of our lunchtime meetings on Wednesdays at Tavistock Country Club. For details, call Ed Pfister at 856-287-0325.
