Christina Faulk is a development associate at the Community FoodBank of New Jersey's (CFBNJ) Egg Harbor Township branch. She joined CFBNJ in November of 2020 during the pandemic and immediately saw the need for food, help and hope in our communities.

Christina's primary goal is to bring awareness to food insecurity in our region and work with our community partners to ensure that our neighbors in need in southern New Jersey have equitable access to nutritious food and other services provided by the Community FoodBank of New Jersey.

A vital component to achieving the CFBNJ mission is raising necessary funding. The pandemic has presented challenges in doing so, therefore, Christina is identifying new ways to engage community partners to assist with these efforts.

Christina holds a B.S. in Business Administration from Rutgers University.

Prior to joining CFBNJ, Christina worked for a nonprofit in Cape May County for many years which deepened her appreciation of the impacts nonprofits make in the communities they serve.

Christina has been a resident of Ocean City for over 15 years. She enjoys living local and patronizing the businesses in her community. It's that sense of helping the community that led her to CFBNJ and directing her talents to helping those in need.
