Program Highlights:

Honor Flight, by Susan Barr

Honor Flight flies veterans from WWII, Korea, and Vietnam to Washington D.C. to recognize their service and to see their war memorial. 42 states and 140 towns and cities participate in the program, which is funded entirely by donations, and is free to the veterans. Some companies donate, such as Snap-on Tools, but much of the funds come from schoolchildren, who also write the vets letters.

Ms. Barr showed a film of a WWII veteran's flight and visit and talked about the challenges and rewards of accompanying this group; many are in wheelchairs and on oxygen. The flight is accompanied by nurses and EMT personnel, and by guardians who push wheelchairs and help out in other ways. So far, 180,000 vets have made the honor flights. The WWII vets are now in their 80's and 90's.

The Honor Flight will be part of the March 28, 2017 NCIS program on TV.
