PROGRAM

Co-President Gail Daugherty invited all members to have a time of club fellowship, focusing on the following topic for their table discussion: How would you answer the following question:

If you had parents or grandparents who lived through the Great Depression and World War II, did any of the stories or experiences they shared impact your life? How so?

Our collective table discussions naturally formed a great segue to Gail's closing quote for the week:

It is better to know some of the questions than all of the answers.

James Thurber

In the above quote, New Yorker magazine veteran journalist James Thurber posits (in Fables for Our Time and Famous Poems Illustrated, published in 1940) that pretending you know it all will get you into trouble. He encourages all generations to remember that curiosity is a sign of respect, and indicates a willingness to learn and grow from the presence of outside perspectives.
