ANNOUNCEMENTS

Brian Nienhaus announced club is still looking for a president-elect nominee. He also voiced appreciation to outgoing Editarian (and social media coordinator) Wilyn Zickler-Formeller for all the fine work she has performed on behalf of the club for several years running. (Hearty applause followed!) Mary McCambridge, in her RI Foundation update, drew members’ attention to the “People of Action” COVID-19 masks available from Russell Hampton Company. As Rotarians, wearing these masks might be a timely way to make it known how people all over the world benefit from the good work of Rotary—such as the new friends she made in Colombia when she scoped out some projects in that country not long ago. Also, RI is about to declare Africa (the entire continent) polio-free, thanks to the efforts of all Rotarians in the Polio Plus campaign!

John Moore gave a final pre-event update on the Rubber Duck Race slated for Aug. 22, at 4 p.m. The team still needed a minimum of four more people to assist with race-day logistics.

Kaycee Headrick gave an update on Boys and Girls Club of Larimer County. With no increase in membership fees for 30 years, the group has maintained its mission to “serve the kids who need us the most.” During the pandemic, BGCLC has operated three emergency sites for healthcare providers; soon they hope to open 12-13 locations as “remote learn centers”—new services for which funding support is needed to provide scholarships for needy families.

PROGRAM

Fran Bostwick introduced Jason R. Lincon, head of the Northern Colorado Regional Airport—only commercially certified airport between Cheyenne and Denver. Highlights of his presentation included the following:

- Achieved (2019) financial sustainability (no outside funding required for airport operations)
- Supports Aimes Community College flight training
- Designated a test site for state to test next-generation air traffic control technologies that give greater control at less operating cost—known as Colorado Remote Tower Project
- Rec’d $17 M from CARES Act, some of which will fund construction of new airport terminal building
