THE ROTARY CLUBS OF ROCHESTER JOIN THE ROCHESTER AREA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The three Rotary clubs of Rochester have purchased membership in the Rochester Area Chamber of Commerce in an effort to promote Rotary to the larger community and to have Rotarians network with local business people on behalf of Rotary. The Rochester Area Chamber of Commerce works to build "...an environment where business can develop, grow and prosper." Rotary's vision is to create , "...a global network of...neighbors, friends, leaders, and problem-solvers who see a world where people unite and take action to create lasting change – across the globe, in our communities, and in ourselves."

Based on our Chamber membership, each Rotary club may send one representative to free member events. Rotarians may also register to attend public events at their own expense. Rotarians will attend Chamber events as representatives of the organization with the purpose of sharing Rotary information by low-key networking and handing out business cards with information on how to learn more about Rotary. Rotarians need to be careful not to appear to be directly recruiting new Rotary members at these events.

THE HISTORY OF ROTARY INTERNATIONAL

Taken from https://clubrunner.blob.core.windows.net/00000005636/en-us/files/homepage/february-2017-moccasin-flower/February-2017v2.pdf

For more than 110 years, Rotary members have been addressing challenges around the world.

Grassroots at the core, Rotary links 1.2 million members to form an organization of international scope. It started with the vision of one man — Paul Harris. The Chicago attorney formed the Rotary Club of Chicago on 23 February 1905, so professionals with diverse backgrounds could exchange ideas, form meaningful, lifelong friendships, and give back to their communities.

Rotary's name came from the group's early practice of rotating meetings among the offices of its members.

"Whatever Rotary may mean to us, to the world it will be known by the results it achieves. ~ Paul Harris, Rotary founder

Our ongoing commitment

Rotary members have not only been present for major events in history — we've also been a part of them. Three key traits have remained strong throughout our history:

We're truly international. Only 16 years after being founded, Rotary had clubs on six continents. Today, members in nearly every country work to solve some of our world's most challenging problems.

We persevere in tough times. During World War II, Rotary clubs in Austria, Germany, Italy, Japan, and Spain were forced to disband. Despite the risks, many continued to meet informally, and after the war, Rotary members came together to rebuild their clubs and their countries.

We're committed to service, and we're not afraid to dream big and set bold goals. We began our fight against polio in 1979 with a project to immunize 6 million children in the Philippines. Today, polio remains endemic in only three countries — down from 125 in 1988.

Featured speakers

Patty Wetterling is an American advocate of children's safety and chair of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Her advocacy particularly focuses on protecting children from abduction and abuse.

Dr. Robert Veninga is Professor Emeritus in the School of Public Health at the University of Minnesota and award-winning author on leadership, organizational innovation and resilience.

TOUCHING LIVES INSPIRING OUR FUTURE

2019-20 RI PRESIDENT ANNOUNCES HIS PRESIDENTIAL THEME

By Arnold R. Grahl, Photos by Alyce Henson

Rotary International President-elect Mark Daniel Maloney explained his vision for building a stronger Rotary, calling on leaders to expand connections to their communities and to embrace innovative membership models.

RI President-elect Mark Daniel Maloney announces the 2019-20 presidential theme, Rotary Connects the World, to incoming district governors in San Diego, California, USA. See video of his speech.

Maloney, a member of the Rotary Club of Decatur, Alabama, USA, unveiled the 2019-20 presidential theme, Rotary Connects the World, to incoming district governors at Rotary's annual training event, the International Assembly, in San Diego, California, USA, on Monday.

"The first emphasis is to grow Rotary — to grow our service, to grow the impact of our projects, but most importantly, to grow our membership so that we can achieve more," Maloney said.

Maloney believes that connection is at the heart of the Rotary experience.

"(Rotary) allows us to connect with each other, in deep and meaningful ways, across our differences," Maloney said. "It connects us to people we would never otherwise have met, who are more like us than we ever could have known. It connects us to our communities, to professional opportunities, and to the people who need our help."

Maloney also called on every Rotary and Rotaract club to identify segments of their community not represented in their club by creating a membership committee with diverse members.

"Through Rotary, we connect to the incredible diversity of humanity on a truly unique footing, forging deep and lasting ties in pursuit of a common goal," he added. "In this ever more divided world, Rotary connects us all."

Maloney urged leaders to offer alternative meeting experiences and service opportunities to make it easier for busy professionals and people with many family obligations to serve in leadership roles.

"We need to foster a culture where Rotary does not compete with the family, but rather complements it," Maloney said. "That means taking real, practical steps to change the existing culture: being realistic in our expectations, considerate in our scheduling, and welcoming of children at Rotary events on every level."

Maloney said many of the barriers that prevent people from serving as leaders in Rotary are based on expectations that are no longer relevant.

"It is time to adapt, to change our culture, and to convey the message that you can be a great district governor without visiting every club individually, and a great president without doing everything yourself."

Relationship with the United Nations

During 2019-20, Rotary will host a series of presidential conferences around the world, focusing on Rotary's relationship with the United Nations and the UN's sustainable development goals that many Rotary service projects support. More information will be available in July.

In 2020, the United Nations will celebrate the 75th anniversary of its charter and its mission of promoting peace. Rotary was one of 42 organizations the United States invited to serve as consultants to its delegation at the 1945 San Francisco conference, which led to the UN's charter. For decades, Rotary has worked alongside the United Nations to address humanitarian issues around the world. Today, Rotary holds the highest consultative status that the UN offers to nongovernmental organizations.

"Rotary shares the United Nations' enduring commitment to a healthier, more peaceful, and more sustainable world," Maloney said. "And Rotary offers something no other organization can match: an existing infrastructure that allows people from all over the world to connect in a spirit of service and peace and take meaningful action toward that goal."

HOW TO BECOME A ROTARY PEACE FELLOW

To be shared with prospective candidates you may know

By Keri B. Lynch

In 2011, Kiran Singh Sirah turned 35 — "halfway through our life's journey," he says, citing Dante's Divine Comedy. The UK native had been living in Edinburgh and Glasgow for a decade, working on a variety of cultural endeavors. "I felt I had done everything I needed to do and learn in Scotland. It was time to take my experiences and move them to the next level."

Information for applicants – Peace Fellowships

That's when Sirah heard about the Rotary Peace Fellowship. Since the program began in 2002, more than 1,200 peace fellows have received fully funded scholarships to study at one of six peace centers at universities around the world. With help from Rotarians in Scotland, Sirah eventually landed one of those scholarships and headed to North Carolina, where he earned a master's degree in folklore studies and a graduate certificate in international peace and conflict resolution.

"It felt like a chance at a second life," he says. "Here was an opportunity to harness new skills, explore new ideas, and get the academic and theoretical knowledge I needed to advance my peacebuilding work."

So how does someone become a Rotary Peace Fellow? And how does a district nominate a potential fellow? Follow the steps laid out below.

Step 1: Determine which of the two fellowship programs offered by Rotary best suits your goals and circumstances.

The master's degree program requires at least three years of relevant full-time work experience and lasts 15 to 24 months, including an applied field experience of two to three months between the first and second academic year. The program is offered at five Rotary Peace Centers based at six universities. Fellows accepted into the program must study at a center outside their home country. The universities are:

- Duke University and University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, United States
- International Christian University, Tokyo, Japan
- University of Bradford, Bradford, England
- University of Queensland, Brisbane, Australia
- Uppsala University, Uppsala, Sweden

Aimed at candidates with at least five years of relevant full-time work experience, the professional development certificate program provides an intensive three-month program in peace and development that includes two to three weeks of field study. It is offered by the Rotary Peace Center at Chulalongkorn University in Bangkok. Residents of any country, including Thailand, may attend the Chulalongkorn peace center.

The Rotary Foundation annually awards up to 50 fellowships in each of the two programs. The fellowship covers tuition and fees, room and board, round-trip transportation, and all research and field study expenses.

Step 2: Review eligibility requirements and application guidelines.

The fellowship application can be found beginning in early February at the peace fellowship page at Rotary.org. It includes an online tool that helps prospective candidates determine whether they are eligible for a fellowship and whether they meet the basic requirements related to education, language skills, and work experience. (For instance, candidates must be proficient in English since all coursework is conducted in that language. See step 4.) Rotary employees, members of Rotary clubs, and the children and grandchildren of club members are ineligible for fellowships.

Fellowships are designed for people with professional experience related to peacebuilding or international development. Candidates must have strong leadership skills and a clear commitment to peace, though what that looks like may vary widely and could include, for instance, work in environmental issues, education and literacy, women's rights, journalism, public health, or disease prevention.

Step 3: Thoroughly research the curriculum at each peace center.

"Each peace center has a different personality," says Summer Lewis, a Kansas native who studied at the University of Queensland from 2011 to 2012. "UQ was rigorous academically. It's a master's in the political science department, so it is heavy on theory versus practice."

"Duke-UNC was suggested to me by the Rotarian committee in Scotland that helped pull my application together," Sirah says. "I looked into the program and realized they had one of the best folklore studies programs in the United States, if not the world. I also liked the interdisciplinary nature of the program."

Candidates are asked to rank the peace centers in order of preference. For Chance Kalolokesya of Malawi, who will graduate in 2020, this was the easiest part of the application process. "I knew what academic program I wanted to study and what kind of career I was anticipating," he says. "Not every Rotary Peace Center offers the same kind of program, and that's why I chose the University of Bradford," which has the largest department of peace studies in the world.

Step 4: Candidates for the master's degree program should obtain their academic transcripts and test scores.

Candidates for the certificate program will not need these materials, but, like the master's candidates, they will want to update their résumés, gather two letters of recommendation, and craft the required essays. All these materials must be submitted through the online application in English.

When editing her résumé, Zimbabwe's Chenai Kadungure, who received her master's degree from the University of North Carolina in 2018, took special care to outline the role of peace in her life. "I had someone help me navigate where my passion for peace was in my résumé," she says. "I discovered that, without realizing it, my entire career had been in peace. Don't underestimate each of the little things you do and have done."

As you write your essay, find a theme that tells your story. "If you've done work in a variety of areas that may appear to be diverse, figure out a thread that connects all those jobs and projects," Lewis says. "Show how they relate to each other, how they build on each other, and how they all led you to where you are today. Do so in a way that tells your story rather than regurgitating your résumé."

For letters of recommendation, a candidate should choose references who can provide concrete examples of his or her academic, professional, and volunteer achievements, while also describing how the candidate would be a good fit for the peace fellowship program.

TOEFL (Test of English as a Foreign Language) and IELTS (International English Language Testing System) scores are required for all non-native English speakers applying to the master's program. GRE (Graduate Record Exam) scores are required for the master's program at UNC and highly recommended at Duke.

"Register early for the required exams," says Kadungure. "The number of individuals who can take the test on a particular date may be limited in your area, so contact the testing center in your country as soon as possible."

Step 5: Contact your Rotary district, which will consider your application for endorsement, and request an interview.

Usually the best way to contact a district is through your local Rotary club; go to Rotary.org and use the Rotary Club Finder to locate clubs in your area. Districts review applications and choose the candidates they wish to endorse.

"Districts can endorse as many candidates as they wish," says Sarah Cunningham, senior marketing programs specialist for the Rotary Peace Centers. "There is no charge to districts to apply, nor do they incur any costs if any of their candidates are selected for a fellowship."

Candidates who have trouble connecting with a Rotary club or district should contact Rotary Peace Center staff no later than 15 May. Districts that need help with the process should also contact staff. All questions and inquiries can be sent to rotarypeacecenters@rotary.org. "If your district feels inundated by a large number of applications, reach out to us," Cunningham says. "We can help connect candidates with districts elsewhere that could review and possibly endorse those applications."

As Kadungure discovered, "finding a club or district to sponsor you can be challenging if you live in an area with fewer Rotarians. Don't hesitate to reach out to the peace center staff if you're struggling to make that connection."

Step 6: Submit your completed application to your Rotary district no later than 31 May.

Begin to prepare for your interview by getting to know all about Rotary. "During your interview, demonstrate that you identify with Rotary's specific values," Lewis says. "Talk about how your work ties into the Foundation's six areas of focus and make it clear how your work aligns with Rotary's, and how you can then help Rotary advance its work and impact in the world."

Step 7: District representatives interview candidates.

Among other things, the interview can help determine if a candidate is ready for the program. "I recommend that if at first you don't succeed, sharpen your application, goals, and plans, and apply again," says Lewis, who applied twice before being accepted.

"In the most recent round of applications, 30 percent of finalists had applied previously and not been accepted, and then were accepted this year," Cunningham says. "So determination pays off."

Step 8: Districts must submit endorsed applications by 1 July.

Each year, between July and October, the Rotary Peace Centers Committee, composed of appointed Rotarians and university representatives, screens endorsed and qualified applications and selects fellowship finalists. Districts and their candidates are notified of the results by November.

Step 9: Selected peace fellows apply to their universities.

Being chosen for a fellowship does not guarantee admission to the university. Candidates must apply for admission to their designated universities and meet all admission requirements. Carefully review the admission requirements to ensure that you're prepared. It is recommended that candidates wait to be notified of their selection to the fellowship before applying for university admission. At Duke-UNC, fellows enroll either in the master's program in international development policy at Duke or in master's programs under various relevant departments and schools at UNC.
