PROGRAM

KSTP news anchor Bill Lunn got his TV start in Duluth, according to Dave Langer, who introduced him. A native of Winona, Bill graduated from St. Mary's, did an internship in Chicago, spent three years as news anchor in Duluth, did the same job for a station in Memphis for a while, then joined KSTP a little over a year ago. Enroute back, he and his family canvassed the entire metro area for a place to live, during which they "happened" to visit Stillwater. "We fell in love with Stillwater's river and lakes...and its great opportunities for boys." Also, it's a great base for his own hunting and fishing.

Bill liked Duluth as a first assignment, but found it a little slow, news-wise. "You had to be creative, like who picked the most blueberries, or which is the best fishing lake," although he did handle some big stories while there. He liked Memphis because it had good deer hunting, but often got the question: "Where'd you say you're from?" He was glad to get back to Minnesota, which he defined as where: "You have jumper cables in your car and your wife knows how to use them"...."People wear parkas with their shorts"...."Ketchup is a little spicy"...."Dairy Queens are closed from November until March"....and "Iowa is a drive down south."

In a short history on KSTP, he reported that Stanley B. Hubbard bought his first camera in the 1930's. The station went online in 1948 and was the first in the country to do a 10 pm news cast. Dave Moore was a "fixture" for about 30 years and when Ron Majors was news anchor "50% of the television sets in the Twin Cities were tuned to KSTP."

Today is different. "Being top station is a horse race, with three stations in a dead heat. No one dominates any more." Stations compete for a diminishing share of the market, because people today are "getting their information from computers. And they're getting answers faster than ever before." Even so, Bill still thinks "KSTP really is the best TV station."

JOKE OF THE WEEK

A man moves into a nudist colony. He receives a letter from his grandmother asking him to send her a current photo of himself in his new location.

Too embarrassed to let her know that he lives in a nudist colony, he cuts a photo in half and mails it.

The next day he discovers that he had accidentally sent the bottom half of the photo. He's really worried but then remembers how bad his grandmother's eyesight is, and hopes she won't notice.

A few weeks later, he receives a letter from his Grandmother. It says: "Thank you for the picture. Change your hairstyle... it makes your nose look too short."

Love, Grandma
