The Library Project in Guatemala

Plans for a school library in Guatemala.

At the club's November 2 meeting, the club met virtually with Alvaro Herrera and Fabiola Fuentes, members of the Club Rotario Los Altos in Quetzaltenango, Guatemala, to discuss plans to place libraries in the schools there. The first would be a prototype for future libraries.

The design has 3 different compartments: a computer station, a library for up to 400 books, and a closet compartment with interactive educational games. The outside of the module will be colored with a mural by local artists allusive to education and fun learning. The inside of the doors of the library will be white board for teaching.

Rural schools in the area lack a lot of the basic infrastructure needed such as clean bathrooms, potable water, kitchen or play areas and thus libraries come last. Most people do not have the custom of reading, leading to deficiency in reading, writing and comprehension and difficulty to grasp ideas and communication. In Guatemala, only one out of 100 people reads for pleasure. 4% of the population has never read a book. The main problem is access to libraries and the ability to read. Quetzaltenango is a mid-sized city of about 180,000 located in the center of the Guatemalan highlands. It is a low-income city where the majority of its population's income is generated in informal markets (mainly agriculture.)

The local Rotary club, Rotario Los Altos, has 18 members, 6 men and 12 women. Breakfast Rotary and Engineers Without Borders worked with their club on the recent water project.

November is Rotary Foundation Month

In 35 years, the global polio eradication effort has built up incredible assets: laboratory testing, surveillance, a frontline workforce of hundreds of thousands who deliver vaccines in polio campaigns around the world. In pretty much every country where the polio eradication initiative is active – over 50 countries – those assets have been dedicated to the COVID-19 response. The world is benefiting – particularly in the poorest countries, where we've been chasing down the last cases of polio – from the infrastructure that the polio initiative has built over the past three decades.
