When a consumer thinks that a company's products/ services stack up better against the competition because the company/ organization is highly involved with its local chamber of commerce, it is because he or she infers that the company is trustworthy, involved in the community and is an industry leader.

If a company shows that it's highly involved in the local chamber (e.g. sits on the Chamber board, sponsors community events), consumers are 12% more likely to think that its products/ services stack up better against its competition.
