Guest Speaker:

Our Guest speaker was Libby Hill, the Victorian Opera's Executive Producer. She originally trained as a dancer but later discovered that just music and dancing 'was a little bit boring' and the inclusion of singing through opera was far more entertaining.

Victorian Opera is a small company with no specific home theatre. It receives $3.7m from the Victorian Government. It focuses on both sustaining its existing audience and encouraging new opera audiences and engaging with young people.

This is in part to shift the perception that opera is seen as elitist, but also to ensure Victoria Opera is vibrant and relevant to as many people as possible. This includes as well as formal opera, education officers visiting schools and conducting workshops; conducting the 'Big Sing', where 200 people came together for a great singing experience and visiting Tasmania to offer opera there where there is no state opera company.
