Remembrance Day – B24 Liberator Restoration Project

Australia is fortunate enough to have preserved an important piece of World War II history inside a hangar located at the Werribee Satellite Aerodrome in Victoria.

The aerodrome was established by the Royal Australian Air Force (RAAF) as a training airfield and a satellite to the nearby Point Cook and Laverton airfields.

Inside the hangar is one of the world's eighteen remaining B-24 Liberator heavy bomber aircraft. This one in particular, A72-176, is the last remaining B-24 aircraft that served in the RAAF during the war.

The B-24 Liberator was used by many Allied air forces during World War II as it was considered to have a more advanced design for its time. It had greater speed, greater range and a heavier bomb load than its principal counterpart, the Boeing B-17 Flying fortress bomber. It was a breakthrough in aircraft technology making the B-24 the most produced military aircraft of World War II.
