FOLLOWING IS A SUMMARY OF THE PRESENTATION ON WHISTLEBLOWING BY DR. PHILMORE ALLEYNE, Senior Lecturer in Accounting, Department of Management Studies University of the West Indies, Cave Hill Campus.

Dr. Alleyne was introduced by PN Peter Williams. The Vote of thanks was given by Director Tracey.

The Barbados Economy in Reflection

Barbados relies on tourism, manufacturing, agriculture and the international financial services sectors to name a few. However, over time, our economy has experienced several crises. For example, the 1970's oil crisis; in 1980's disintegration of the sugar industry; 1990's introduction of the structural adjustment programme and the 2008 global financial meltdown.

These demonstrate our vulnerability to external influences and as such, rating agencies such as Standard and Poor's and Moody have continued to downgrade us. We are also vulnerable to crises that stem from within the country such as the allegations of wrongdoing through corruption.

Definition of Corruption

Corruption is defined as the "abuse of power for private benefit" alternatively, the Oxford Dictionary adopts a more moral and ethical standpoint by defining it as "dishonest or illegal behaviour from those in authority." It can cause issues such as poverty, mortality, destroy trust in leaders and institutions and keep investors away.

Cases of Corruption (wrongdoing)

There have been several documented cases of alleged wrongdoing within the Caribbean. One can highlight the three most publicised cases: the collapse of Antigua-based Stanford Financial Group, the Trinidadian based Hindu Credit Union and finally, the case which today continues to have a reverberating impact on the entire Caribbean, the collapse of regional conglomerate, Colonial Life Insurance Company (CLICO) in

Meanwhile, the Organized Crime Transparency International (OCTI), a global movement that aims for a corruption-free world, ranks countries worldwide based on their level of corruption and publishes a yearly Corruption Perceptions Index. Scores are ranged from 0 (highly corrupt) to 100 (very clean). In 2016, Barbados scored 61, which is fairly decent and is well above the global average score of 43. In fact, Barbados is perceived as one of the least corrupt Caribbean countries, second only to the Bahamas on this index. However, that score of 61 represents a significant decline from the excellent score of 76 recorded 5 years ago in 2012, and perhaps may be due to the effects of some of the major corruption cases that have plagued the region.

What can be done?

The devastating impact of wastage, fraud and inefficiency on developing countries' economies is much greater than in larger countries with abundant resources. This makes small nations such as Barbados quite vulnerable to corruption. Many researchers have provided various recommendations with reference to anti-corruption strategies that can be implemented by organizations and countries. To this end, whistleblowing has been argued as a key corporate governance control mechanism to root out corruption within organizations and societies.

What is Whistleblowing?

Near and Miceli (1985, p.4) define whistle-blowing as "the disclosure by organization members (former or current) of illegal, immoral or illegitimate practices under the control of their employers, to persons or organizations that may be able to effect action." Organizational wrongdoing includes corruption, financial fraud and committing questionable acts among others. It involves the reporting of wrongdoing to internal channels (hotline, audit committee, human resource manager, senior manager,) and external channels (regulator, law enforcement, media). Organizations prefer observers of wrongdoing to report internally rather than externally, since management may not want to 'air the dirty laundry' in public. Additionally, internal reporting gives the organization the opportunity to engage in damage control, correct wrongdoing; thus, protect their reputation.

Let us make a distinction here. There is a difference between informing and whistleblowing. Informants are often involved in the wrongdoing, and may use reporting to clarify their role or reduce potential liability (similar to an informant seeking to obtain a reduced sentence for assisting the police). Whistleblowing, on the other hand, is not geared towards selfpreservation and does not include malicious intention; rather there is an intention to correct the actual wrongdoing. Some have argued that an employee who has a duty or obligation to report cannot be categorized as a whistleblower. Nonetheless, whether an employee is making a disclosure out of duty or for any other unknown reasons, it is important to note that care must be taken on receiving such reports, and the manner in how they are handled. Can we consider notices on social media which seek to damage the reputation of all as being whistle -blowing? We have to be very careful with malicious and invalid reports which seek to destroy the reputation of other persons. Continued next page

Caribbean: Cases of Whistleblowing

Within the Caribbean there have been several documented cases, specifically in Trinidad and Tobago. However, perhaps one of the most publicised cases was that of Renee-Anne Shirley a former executive of the Jamaican Anti-Doping Commission (JADCO). She disclosed that the level of dope testing in Jamaica was far from rigorous in the lead up to the London Olympic Games and was branded as a "Judas" or "Traitor" and was forced into hiding as a result of the reactions to her disclosure.

CONCLUSION

In closing, today corruption is viewed as a global problem. We need to work together to prevent it from becoming normal patterns of behavior and reaching epidemic levels; thus, ensuring that our workplace, communities, and country is corruption free.

OBJECT OF ROTARY

The Object of Rotary is to encourage and foster the ideal of service as a basis of worthy enterprise and in particular to encourage and foster:

FIRST: The development of acquaintance as an opportunity of service;

SECOND: High ethical standards in business and professions, the recognition and the worthiness of all useful occupations, and the dignifying of each Rotarian's occupa tion as an opportunity to serve society;

THIRD: The application of the ideal of service in each Rotari an's personal, business and community life; and

FOURTH: The advancement of the international understanding, goodwill and peace through a world of fellowship of business and professional persons united in the ideal of service.
