GOING ROUND IN CIRCLES

Brett Belstead , Director of South West Operations, Main Roads Department was our keynote address for this evening. Brett explain the developments of the roundabout at Eelup over the past 100 days. Some of the main issues were speed, difficult sight lines, congestion at peak times of the day/ long week-ends, and lots of trucks, resulting in the dubious title of the worst crash sight in WA. Hence, the need to make some changes.

MORE ABOUT EELUP ROUNDABOUT, FROM PAGE 1

Bret explained some of the options developed from traffic micro-simulations. These included shortening the distance on exits, increasing the number of lanes, use of traffic lights, modifying bridges and other roads to redirect trucks. Further developments to upgrade the sight were interchange and flyer over options. This will help cope with the expected increase of traffic, due to residential developments. Brett also explained how the traffic will be monitored using an optic fibre cable from the sight back to the Perth office, a promising outcome.

HAVE MUCH DELIGHT IN PRESENTING

Henry Oakeley tells us of his travels in the search of orchids, following in the footsteps of the Spanish explorers, Hipolito Ruiz and Joseph Pavon, who travelled through Peru and Chile in 1777 to 1788, looking for the orchids they had found and which had been lost to civilization. 2,300 metres up in the Andes, a day's walk from the nearest road, Henry Oakeley will show you a profusion of orchids growing in their natural habitat.

Dr Henry Oakeley

"Orchid Hunting in Peru"

Dr Henry Oakeley is a retired psychiatrist who has been growing orchids for nearly 60 years, but for the last six years has been the curator ('The Garden Fellow') of the Medicinal Garden of the Royal College of Physicians in London. His special interest in orchids is a group of Latin American orchids and he has visited Latin America 28 times, orchid hunting. He has written extensively on orchids and medicinal plants, and lectured world wide.
