Australia Day 2022 is over for another year, our Australia Day Breakfast went off without a hitch, we prepared and cooked for 500, numbers were down on last year I would suspect largely due to COVID restrictions like mandatory mask wearing although I saw many not complying.

The multicultural aspect with the various dance groups went off very well. After the record heatwave we experienced over the last couple of weeks a temperature of around 26° was most welcome.

The other big event on our cooking calendar is the Gunfire Breakfast on Anzac Day morning for the RSL, just learned that we are not required this year, the local RSL has decided that they will not support the usual breakfast this year.

(Absolutely their decision, COVID would have been a major influencing factor) Records show our first Anzac Day Breakfast was 2012, we did every year from then on until COVID struck in 2020. Club members did most of the prep. the day before, members were up around 4am to prepare and have up to 500 breakfast's cooked ready to serve for the completion of the Dawn Service at 6am. Whether that opportunity will ever occur in the future is anyone's guess. COVID has impacted many things over the last 2 years, it's not done yet. The next 12 months are going to be perhaps the most challenging in our lifetime. Stay safe.

The back-Yard art of Bee Keeping.

Chris told us a little about Beekeeping at home in a suburban area, he keeps 3 hives at home in Wellard which on a good year produces for him about 60 kilos of honey. His most recent haul being of the Jarrah variety. Chris is also a member of a local Beekeeping group who meet regularly to chat and exchange ideas and experiences on the art of beekeeping.

What does one need to keep beehives in a suburban backyard?
backyard beekeeping, safe?

Yes. Provided you follow a few tried and tested guidelines.

Hobby beekeeping in suburban backyards has been a thing long before it became trendy. Anyone can reap the benefits of backyard beekeeping with a little common sense and planning. Chris has 3 hives which he says is ideal for his backyard. Wooden hives have 3 sections, hive bottom, hive body and top cover. What other equipment do you need?

Is

Protective veil and gloves: Novice beekeepers, especially, should avoid stings at all costs. "You don't want to get stung and be distracted and drop a frame on the ground.

•Smoker: This helps calm and distract the bees while you're working within the hive.

•Hive tool: Reminiscent of an elongated paint scraper, this must-have allows you to easily access the hive and move frames around.

•Bees: Again, make sure you order enough for the number of colonies.

How do I get my bees?

To that note, you can typically go about filling your hives one of two ways. The most common route, is called a package—a small screen box with about 10,000 loose bees.

The queen, which typically bears no relation to the other honeybees, stays separated in a cage.

On the other hand, you can buy a nucleus colony, which is essentially a mini colony. Each already contains an actively-laying queen and five frames of comb. Nuc colonies cost about $50-$75 more than packages, but, developmentally, they're about six weeks ahead.

President Bob: Forgot to request a report from the 'Treasurer.

Ian C fined all those who were pictured in last weeks Bulletin not wearing their masks, Ian and Brian were the only ones complying.
