Bulletin

No 34 20th April 2020

We had our second Zoom meeting last night, good turnout with there being 16 connected at one point, debate now is whether 40 minutes is long enough for a meeting or should we purchase a subscription?
Who'd of thought just two decades ago we would have this technology available to us, it was science fiction stuff.
Remember when a telephone conference call was considered new experience ?

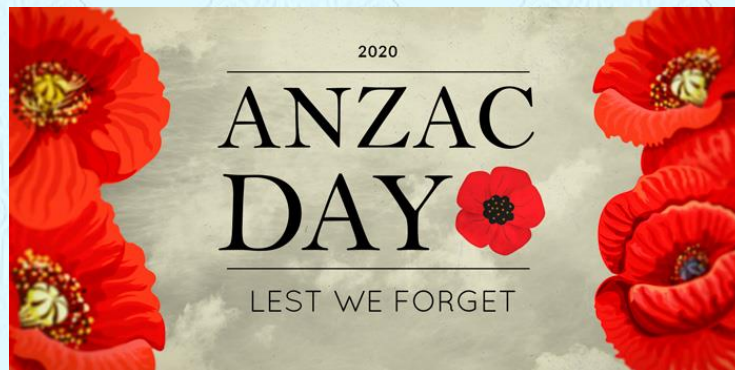

As I write this weeks offering things are looking a whole lot better right across Australia, here in WA we are almost down to zero numbers of COVID 19 reported cases, however I do understand that we should not become complacent and continue to adhere to the tight restrictions we still have in place with the hope that some will be lifted or modified in the coming weeks.

I still feel great concern for our friends and relatives residing in overseas countries, things are much worse for those people living the UK, Europe and the USA, one can't imagine how much pain they are going through at this time, there are however signs that in much of the 'rich world' the curve has peaked and is flattening, I fear that the fight to control the pandemic world-wide will be a long and slow one.

Anzac Day this year is going to be quite different to our usual task of cooking 700 breakfasts for the Dawn Service which along with many other events have become a casualty of COVID 19.

President's Pen

20th April 2020

I am pleased to report that we increased the number of attendees to our e-meeting on Monday night to 15. We welcomed DG Wayne to the throng as well as Chris O, John W, and Bevan. Thank you to everyone.

Wayne showed his talent as a background creator and was ably joined by Stephen who had us whisked away to lands afar.

Since this meeting Max has given me instructions on how to set up the meetings and you should have had my first invite for the 4th May.

We are currently investigating partnerships with others so that we may be able to extend our meeting times to allow the inclusion of guest speakers.

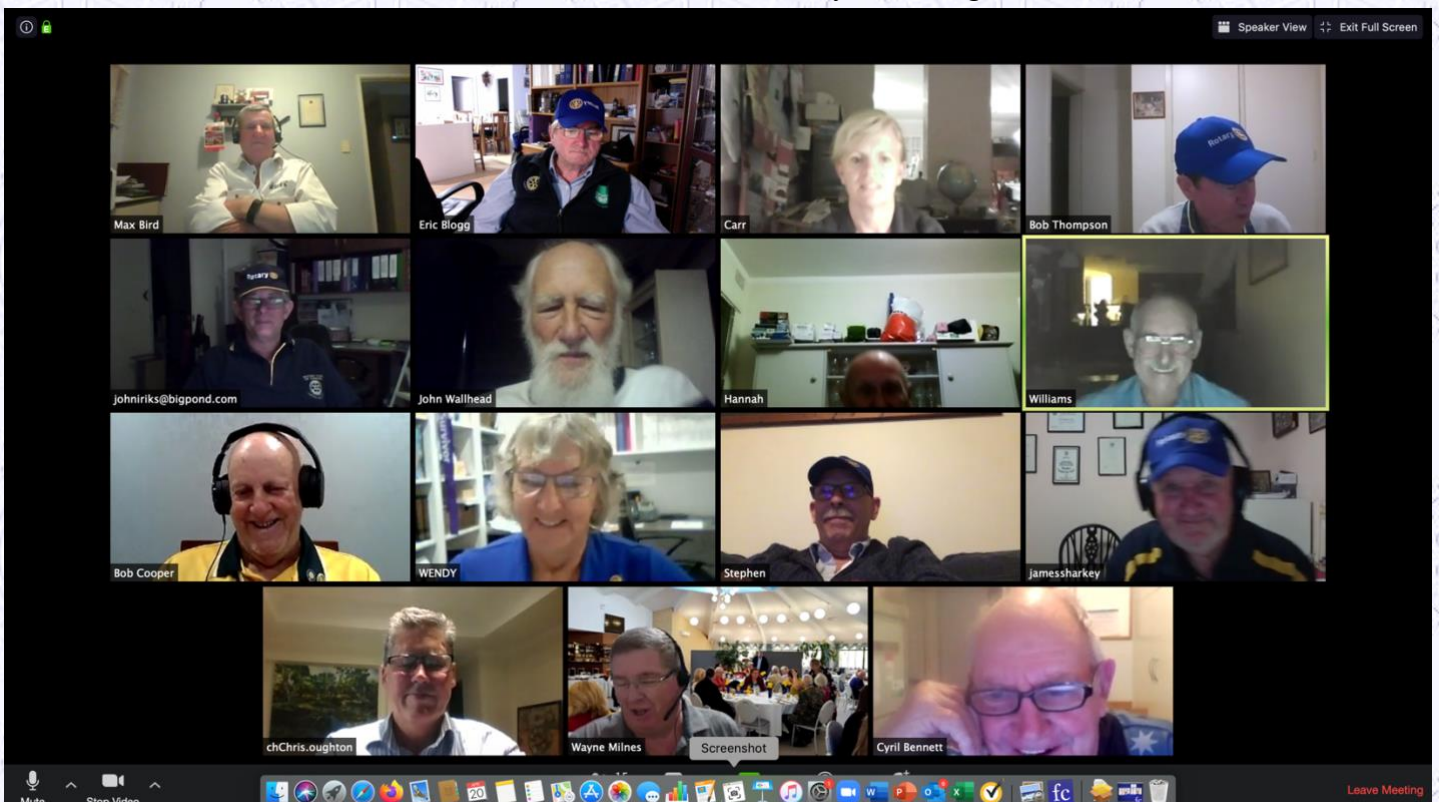

As you can imagine mail is few and far between with only 4 pieces since the last meeting before Easter other than emails.

Genevieve reported that Cyrus is isolated in Switzerland as we are here. I felt this was an indication that his parents were happy with the YEP and the safety of their son.

It is great to hear of the number of members who are in frequent contact with each other to maintain the contact and concern for one another.

Stay safe. Thinking of you all.

Screen-shot from Monday's meeting

President 2020/21.

PDG John Iriks

Deputy Bill Rowe.

Donald Trump met with the Queen of England, and he asked her, "Your Majesty, how do you run such an efficient government? Are there any tips you can give me?"

"Well," replied the Queen, "the most important thing is to surround yourself with intelligent people."

Trump frowned, and then asked, "But how do I know the people around you are really intelligent?"

The Queen took a sip of tea. "Oh, that's easy; you just ask them to answer an intelligent riddle."

The Queen pushed a button on her intercom. "Please send Boris Johnson in here, would you?"

The Prime Minister walked into the room and said, "Yes, Your Majesty?"

The Queen smiled and said, "Answer me this, if you would, Boris. Your mother and father have a child. It is not your brother and it is not your sister. Who is it?"

Without pausing for a moment, he answered, "That would be me."

"Yes! Very good," said the Queen.

Trump went back home to ask Mike Pence the same question. "Mike, answer this for me. Your mother and your father have a child. It's not your brother and it's not your sister. Who is it?"

"I'm not sure," said Pence. "Let me get back to you on that one." He went to his advisers and asked everyone, but none could give him an answer.

Finally, Pence ran in to his friend Jack Murphy in a restaurant the next night. Pence asked, "Jack, can you answer this for me? Your mother and father have a child and it's not your brother or your sister. Who is it?"

Jack Murphy answered right back, "That's easy, it's me!"

Pence smiled, and said, "Thanks!"

Pence then went back to speak with Trump. "Say, I did some research and I have the answer to that riddle: It's my friend Jack Murphy!"

Trump got up, stomped over to Pence, and angrily yelled, "No, you idiot! It's Boris Johnson!"

Zoom brings in big guns to fix security problems

Paid users can avoid specific data centres. By Denham Sadler on Apr 20 2020 11:26 PM

Zoom will allow users to choose where their data is routed and has brought on board an renowned cybersecurity expert as the company battles to improve its security and privacy in the wake of widespread controversies.

The video conferencing giant is in the midst of a 90-day plan to improve its security and privacy after increased usage led to heightened scrutiny and a series of issues were identified.

As of Saturday, paid-up Zoom users are able to control their own data routing by customising which of Zoom's data centres around the world their account uses for its real-time meeting traffic.

This will be done through Zoom account holders opting in or out of specific data centre regions. These regions include the US, Canada, Europe, India, Australia, China, Latin America and Japan/Hong Kong.

“This will determine the meeting servers and Zoom connectors that can be used to connect to Zoom meetings or webinars you are hosting and ensure the best-quality service,” Zoom CTO Brendan Ittelson said in a blog post.

“This feature gives our customers more control over their data and their interaction with our global network when using Zoom's industry-leading video communication services.”

Those using Zoom for free will still be restricted to the data centre within their default region, which for most is the US.

The company has also brought in Luta Security to reboot its bug bounty program.

Luta Security is led by Katie Moussouris, who has “created some of the most important vulnerability programs still running today”.

These include launching Microsoft Vulnerability Research and Symantec Vulnerability Research, and starting Microsoft and the Pentagon's bug bounty programs.

“Katie has testified as an expert on bug bounties and the labour market for security research for the US Senate, and has also been called upon for European Parliament hearings on dual-use technology,” Zoom said in another blog post.

“We're thrilled to have Katie and the Luta Security team on board.”

Zoom and Luta Security will first be seeking feedback on the company's existing bug bounty program before looking to make improvements to it.

“We're not changing the day-to-day bug bounty operations, platforms or rules without your input,” they said. “Now's the perfect time to get feedback directly from the researcher community.”

“Luta Security and Zoom will take this feedback and use it to make a world-class bug bounty program that advances our relationship with researchers and remains consistent with our commitment to protect user security.”

Zoom has faced a number of controversies recently as the platform has seen an explosion in use due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. It has been criticised for “misleading marketing” after it was revealed the company does not offer end-to-end encryption, despite claiming so.

New York Attorney-General Letitia James has also launched an investigation into Zoom’s data privacy and security practices, and questioned how it responded to identified vulnerabilities and flaws, saying they would “enable malicious third parties to, among other things, gain surreptitious access to consumer webcams”.

Last week it was revealed that 500,000 Zoom credentials had been dumped on the dark web. There’s no indication this was a result of a breach at Zoom though, but was rather the result of a credential stuffing attack.

These events led Zoom CEO Eric Yuan to issue a mea culpa, saying he was “deeply sorry”, and launching the 90-day improvement plan. These initiatives include the improved bug bounty program, along with a freeze on new features, a transparency report, a comprehensive review with third-party experts and a new CISO council.

Does anyone know how long toilet paper will last if you freeze it ??

I could tell you a coronavirus joke.

but you'll have to wait two weeks to see if you get it.

“Due to ongoing COVID-19 virus fears, Sweet Caroline is now banned from use. There will be no touching hands, reaching out, touching me, touching you.”

“Oh my God. Finland just closed their borders and they just cancelled the Olympics...
I guess no one will be crossing the finish line.”

Did you hear the joke about the germ?
Never mind I can't tell you, I don't want to spread it around.

If Coronavirus isn't about beer, why do I keep seeing cases of it?

What's the best way to avoid touching your face? A glass of wine in each hand.

What do you tell yourself when you wake up late for work and realise you have a fever?
Self, I so late.

You just know the Americans are gonna be making films about COVID-19 where they make it out like they single handedly ended the whole pandemic themselves. Someone like The Rock will play the badass scientist who finds the cure while also fighting terrorists for some reason
