AUGUST 28, 2026 PROGRAM

Jerry Garza is a lifelong Laredoan whose career spans public service, education, journalism, business, and community leadership. He became the youngest elected Webb County Commissioner at age 29 and later spent nearly two decades in television journalism across South Texas. Today, he works as a financial advisor and real estate broker while remaining actively involved in civic, faith, and community organizations, including Rotary. Most recently, Jerry was elected Webb County Judge, marking a return to public service and the beginning of a new chapter in his commitment to Webb County.

RECAP OF LAST WEEK

Mario Peña of Able City presented "Urbanism – Part 2," continuing the conversation on how thoughtful planning and design can shape stronger communities. He discussed the importance of creating more walkable, connected neighborhoods, incorporating mixed-use development, and making sure planning decisions support both quality of life and long-term economic sustainability. Mario also shared examples of Able City's work in Laredo and across the region, highlighting how planning, architecture, economic development, and community engagement can work together to help cities grow with purpose.
