LAST MEETING RECAP

For our last meeting, Jesus "Chuy" Dominguez, 111th District Court Judge shared an overview of the progress made in modernizing Laredo's court system and improving access to justice.

Since taking office in 2018, the court has focused on managing a growing caseload while making operations more efficient. Technology upgrades, expanded online services, and a move toward a "paper-light" system helped streamline court processes. During the COVID-19 pandemic, these improvements allowed the court to quickly transition to Zoom hearings, handling more than 23,000 cases virtually between March 2020 and May 2021.

Judge Dominguez mentioned that the court also reorganized its scheduling system by creating approximately 13 specialized dockets and establishing 10 standing orders that allow eligible individuals to resolve certain matters without unnecessary court appearances.

Community involvement has also been a priority. Through partnerships with nonprofits, faith-based organizations, and animal-care programs, individuals may complete community service as an alternative to paying fines. These efforts have generated the equivalent of more than $1 million in community-service work.

Looking ahead to the 111th District Court, the judge plans to continue emphasizing efficiency, flexible scheduling, hybrid hearings, and the responsible use of artificial intelligence to improve court operations.
