

What is Truth?

In my opinion I think truth means giving the right information even if it hurts someone's feelings. The truth is sometimes heartbreaking and sometimes the right decision. Being honest and out there is an example of truth. It is the right thing to be truthful and honest even in bad situations because it is your opinion.

Truth is finding a way to say what is right and do what is right. Fairness is no more important than the truth. I think that because truth is defined as being honest with everything including yourself. Fairness is basically equal to the truth because fairness means to be equal with what is right and to have the same equalities as everyone else.

Truth is defined as doing what is right and showing that in a relationship is by being loyal with whomever you are friends with. Truth can be used to build better relationships by acting the truth and being honest with every action. This can help whoever you are friends with to trust you and rely on you as much as possible. Too even have deep conversations with you because your friend knows you will give good advice and the right advice at that.

I think, in my opinion, that truth is definitely beneficial to everyone because having the truth around you can make you feel secure and more self aware. Having the right idea about yourself and everything else can help you succeed and help others with this too. Some of the truth could let you down a little bit but knowing that you can make the better out of that you can succeed. You being truthful to everyone even if it hurts, can help others see what is really there and important.

People today determine the truth as being harsh and rude but the truth can help people's lives change. With a little lie the truth is not always right and most of the time not right because that makes the truth distorted and shaped and could lead to bigger lies and lead on from that. Yes the truth is the most important thing even if people suffer from it because sometimes the truth can change peoples state of mind.
