Carmen Dunlap Honduras Micro-Finance

We've recently read and heard about the number of Hondurans coming to the United States. Join us for another perspective to learn about Honduran women who are making great strides to improve the lives of their families and villages through the benefits of micro-financing. The Honduran-based NGO, Adelante, with financial support of the San Diego-based Women's Empowerment, offers low interest micro-loans for women to open their own, typically home-based businesses such as snack or tortilla shops or clothing re-sale shops. You'll be amazed what these women accomplish with the smallest of loans as seed money.

Carmen Zuñiga Dunlap, Ph.D. of Honduran heritage, recently made site visits of Adelante-supported small businesses and homes (as well as a family visit to relatives in Tegucigalpa, the country's capital), and, drawing from her experiences, will share insights into the lives of Honduran women across the socio-economic spectrum.
