In the vast majority of the languages worldwide, the word for "mother" begins with the letter "M."

The earliest Mother's Day celebrations can be traced back to the spring celebrations of ancient Greece in honor of Rhea, the Mother of the Gods.

During the 1600's, England celebrated a day called "Mothering Sunday," celebrated on the 4th Sunday of Lent. This was a time put aside for relaxation and enjoyment during the long Lenten fast. Servants would go home to see their families, bringing cakes and sweets to their moms. This custom was called "going a-mothering." Each mother would receive a simnel-cake (Latin for "fine flour") and mothers would give a blessing to their children.

Other lore relates that centuries ago, it was considered important for people to return to their home or "mother" church once a year. So every year during Lent, people would visit their "mother" church, generally the main church or Cathedral of the area.

Early "Mother's Day" in the US was mostly recognized by women's peace groups. An early activity was the meeting of groups of mothers whose sons had served or died on opposite sides of the American Civil War. There were local Mother's Day celebrations in the 1870s and the 1880s, but nothing to speak of on a state or national basis.

In 1868 Ann Jarvis created a committee to establish a "Mother's Friendship Day" whose purpose was "to reunite families that had been divided during the Civil War," and she wanted to expand it into an annual memorial for mothers, but she died in 1905 before the celebration became popular. Later her daughter Anna Jarvis would continue her efforts.

1914 - President Woodrow Wilson signed the order that made Mother's Day a national holiday in the United States, due largely to the continued efforts of Anna Jarvis (daughter of Ann Jarvis). She asked that white carnations be the official Mother's Day symbol.
