Do you remember watching Neil Armstrong take that "One small step for man?" I remember our family watching it on our giant, black & white, floor console, TV that lived in the basement because it was so big. The discussion we were having as we watched Neil descend the lunar module's ladder to take that small step was whether Dad's 35 mm Retina camera would capture the images on the Kodachrome slide film or whether the film would return from processing without any image at all.

Our particular TV set had a strange feature – one that I have never seen since – that was when it was turned on, a plastic frame (think like the plastic-covered lights on either side of an old-style medicine cabinet's mirror), which surrounded the tube, would light up. [I think it might have been a feature to tell the dunder-heads of the family that the TV was left on and eating up the electricity...like we wouldn't notice the static picture that filled the screen following the playing of the National Anthem as the flag waved]. We determined that if the film could not capture the TV image, it would certainly capture the lighted border.

Dad had never tried to take a picture of the television screen when the TV was turned on so we speculated as to whether the electro-magnetic field or beams of light emitted by the tube would interfere with capturing the still photo or not. Oh, we were scientifically sophisticated in our thinking!

I think that roll of film might have been the most anticipated one of my childhood. We wanted to see if "Mankind's giant leap" had been captured by Dad's camera. It had been – with the lighted border and all! I haven't seen that picture for 50 years, but I know it's somewhere among the tens of thousands of slides my father took to document a lifetime of experiences.

The news reports of the past few days leading up to the July 20, the 50th Anniversary of "Mankind's giant leap," are filled with observations, reminiscences, and reminders about how exciting, yet nerve wracking, the 8 days between July 16 and July 24, 1969, were.

If you haven't had a chance yet, go to Google's home page and click on the arrow. You will see an animated video accompanied by Mike Collins' narration of their historic flight.

From the Family of Rotary Chair: Shaun McCoach

As the new chair of the Family of Rotary Committee,
 I wanted to provide you with a quick update on the happenings coming to our Club this Rotary Year.
 As always, volunteers for planning committees and day of coordination would be most appreciated!

Tomorrow !

July 20 - Family of Rotary picnic at Wolgemuth Park 3-7pm.
 Bring a dish to share and consider joining the "Food Fight!"

The RSVP link to sign up a dish

Remember, if you're planning on submitting a dish for "Food Fight" judging, please mark that separately on the sign up.

Questions? sjmcccoach@gmail.com.

August 17 - Mini Golf Tournament at Adventure Sports – Fun for the whole family!

September 7 or 14 - Day of Caring will once again be our service project of the month. Details from our Service Committee will be forthcoming.

Tree planting will also be taking place sometime in late September or Early October.

October (Late) - Pints for Polio will be back in full swing or swig, I guess. Please be thinking of potential silent auction or door prize giveaways that we can promote as well as other entertainment we could incorporate to keep people engaged at our host breweries and keep them in the house for longer than just a "one and done."

November - We will be taking this month to focus on the Tree
 Sale in late November and December.

More to come as we move into 2020.
