

Exchange Student Tracey Brice

Since leaving New Zealand in 1994 I went to the University of Saskatchewan, in my hometown of Saskatoon, and obtained a 4 year Bachelor of Arts in International Studies (Honours) and a 3 year law degree. I also spent a summer in Vancouver studying Mandarin Chinese. In 2000 I moved from Saskatoon to British Columbia, and I now work as a lawyer in a city called Kelowna. Kelowna has a 140 km lake running through it, and is in close proximity to ski hills and vineyards. We are also very close to the USA border. My preferred area of legal practice is family law. I have two children, an 11 year old boy and a fourteen year old girl, who both love playing sports. My son is an ice hockey goalie, and does competitive swimming, and my daughter retired from international gymnastics about two years ago and is now focusing on dance, basketball and acting. I taught my son the game of cricket by watching the last Cricket World Cup on TV, and my son and I are avid, vocal fans of the All Blacks. There are a lot of people from South Africa in Kelowna so it's fun to remind them of when the All Blacks beat South Africa. The kids and I are hoping for trip to New Zealand and Australia in the next few years but we have a tentative plan to travel to South Africa and Botswana next June / July for an extended safari trip with two other families from our city.

Rebecca Gilroy who the Christchurch Sunrise Club sponsored for Rotary Exchange in 1994, came to stay with me and my family in Saskatoon in 1994. We continue to keep in touch and on two occasions she has come to visit my extended family who still live in Saskatoon when my kids and I have been visiting.

Kelowna is a city in the south of Canada's British Columbia province. It's in the Okanagan Valley, on the eastern shore of Okanagan Lake, surrounded by provincial parks, pine forest, vineyards, orchards and mountains. Its downtown area incorporates waterfront City Park and a lakeside cultural district. More than 20 local vineyards offer wine tours and tastings.
