They are based on the great powers that were the victors of the 2nd World War and are:

China, France, Russia, United Kingdom, United States

The other 10 members are non-permanent with 5 being elected each for a 2 year term.

MUNA Rule Summary

Rule 1: Permission to Address the Assembly

In order to maintain order, permission to address the Assembly can only be granted by the Secretary General. Delegates when called upon to speak, for example I might say something like, “I now call upon the representatives of Tunisia.” That delegate should stand, wait for the microphone and begin with, “Mr Secretary General, we the delegates from... Tunisia

Rule 2: Debating a Resolution

When a resolution is to be debated the Secretary General will call for (by show of hands)

1. Proposer
2. Secunder
3. Then all those who wish to speak FOR the motion
4. Then all those who wish to speak against – the first speaker against is the Principal Speaker against
5. Speakers will then speak For and Against in turn
6. At the end of the speeches the Proposer and the Principal Speaker against have the opportunity to make closing statements. These should be used to summarise their case and rebut the arguments of the opposing side BUT not to introduce new arguments

Rule 3: Amendments to a Resolution

The Secretary General will seek the acquiescence (agreement) of the original proposer and seconder of the motion – if accepted it becomes the new resolution.

3. If not the amendment can be withdrawn or it can be put to a vote of the assembly.

NOTE: The Secretary General will limit the number of amendments, they will only be entertained if it is obvious that the original resolution is doomed and that a minor modification that does not challenge the integrity of the original resolution could result in a successful resolution being put.

Rule 4: Point of Order (P of O)

1. Any delegate can stop proceedings by rising in their seat and when recognised by the Secretary General ask for a ruling on a Point of Order
2. A point of Order refers to an issue of fact that needs to be disputed or if the behaviour of a delegate is questionable.
3. For example, a delegate may make a slanderous comment about a country's leader or make a grossly inaccurate comment about a country.
4. To be upheld by the Secretary General they must be based on well-accepted fact and not opinion.

NOTE: P of O's will be limited as they interrupt the flow of debate

MUNA Rule Summary

Rule 5: Leave to make a statement

Granted by the Secretary General only to clarify an error in debate.

Rule 6: Motion of Dissent

Delegates can introduce these if in their opinion the Secretary General is showing bias in his rulings or his conduct of proceedings.

Procedure:

1. Motion of Dissent is proposed
2. Motion is seconded
3. The Secretary General vacates the Chair in favour of the President
4. Motion is put to the vote.
5. If successful the S.G. vacates the chair for the rest of that debate.

Rule 7: That the motion be put

If a debate is going nowhere and speakers do not appear to have any thing new to say, any delegate can move that the motion be put.

Procedure:

1. At a suitable break the delegate gains the attention of the Secretary General
2. Motion is seconded
3. If carried all debate ceases and a vote on the resolution is called
4. If not carried the debate can continue.

Rule 8: Diplomatic Notes:

These are usually passed between Block members or are used to assist members who are yet to speak.

Use them sparingly and not for social reasons as they can become disruptive to the operation of the debates.

NOTE: the Secretary General will reserve the right to intercept diplomatic mail.

Rule 9: Suspension of Standing Orders

These are used by the Secretary General to interrupt proceedings to acknowledge the arrival of specific people such as the Rotary District Governor

BLOCS

For the purpose of discussing strategies to best achieve their desired result, countries are placed into blocs. Whilst the blocs below attempt to follow logical groupings, they have been adjusted in order to keep them with reasonably equal numbers.
