Project Handclasp is a partnership between the SWT and the United States Navy. Through this program the United States Navy offers logistical support for our clean water initiatives by supplying free shipping for our bio sand filters to Haiti and other countries around the world. In addition the US Navy carries a supply of Hydrad bio sand water filters aboard its ships as part of their humanitarian program. According to Paul Brown, Director/CEO US Navy Project Handclasp, “The Hydrad filter is the top request from Commanders for humanitarian supplies aboard Navy ships as the Navy seeks to win the hearts and minds of people around the world”. The SWT has had preliminary discussions with Project Handclasp and the US State Department to significantly expand this program over the next few years.
